Council backs down on Collins
In the face of overwhelming support for City Administrator Jack Collins at a stormy meeting Monday night, the Carmel City Council affirmed its policy of having Collins retain his powers to hire and fire city personnel. At the same time, it voted to keep the issue alive by appointing a committee to study the question. See page 3.

Annexation protest hearing March 19
Residents of Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods will get a chance to tell officials how they feel about annexation to Carmel at a protest hearing scheduled for March 19 at Sunset Center. See page 5.

Odello development before Planning Commission
The County Planning Commission will try to decide next week which version of a development plan it will accept before it orders an Environmental Impact Report. The Odellos are asking for a 200-room hotel, 97 condominiums and a farmers' market on the 134 acres they still own at the Carmel River east of Highway 1. See page 5.

Supervisors set date for CV Ranch appeal
The Board of Supervisors set Feb. 27 as the date of a public hearing on an appeal of the approval given to developers of the Carmel Valley Ranch in Carmel Valley. The City of Carmel has joined the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and the Carmel Area Coalition in the appeal. Text of their appeal and further information can be found on page 8.

R-4 Committee makes progress
The first signs of progress from the committee appointed to work out means of building apartments in the new R-4 zone came this week. Although agreement was not unanimous, it appears as though some recommendations will go before the Planning Commission soon. See page 4.

Council to discuss regulation of design for private residences
At its regular meeting Tuesday night, top item on the agenda for the Carmel City Council will be a discussion of the recommendation that the city exercise design control over two-story homes in the residential district. The controversial measure would cover new homes and remodelling jobs as well. See page 10.

Realty firm must change name
Carmel-by-the-Sea Realty will have to change its name, Superior Court Judge Richard Barelli ruled last week. Too many folks might get the firm mixed up with Carmel Realty Company, the judge ruled. See page 12.

Underground water supply to be studied
A report by Governor Brown's blue ribbon commission on water rights has recommended far-reaching changes in the way water rights are handled. The possible effect these changes could have on Carmel Valley are discussed in an article on page 14.

DOES THIS bubbling brook look like a tranquil scene in the heart of Big Sur? Guess again. This photo was taken after a rainstorm last week within Carmel's city limits. Need a hint? It is inside the business district. We encourage our readers to guess where this quiet haven is located. We'll publish the answer in next week's "Pine Cone." (Kirk McClelland photo)

Auditory integrity

Dear Editor:

The "Clambake" is over for another year. What a festive occasion! Since it is "a calendar event" now I suppose we must all be a bit more tolerant than usual for a gathering nurtured by the late great Bing Crosby. I even paid $10 this year for a glimpse of Arnold Palmer, excalibre even in advancing years, and Gerald Ford, who squeezed in Nelson Rockefeller's funeral in New York between rounds at Cypress Point and Pebble Beach.

Never have I been aware of so much noise! Even the distant din of Laguna Seca Raceway, high school Hondas and chain saws could not combine to equal the number of airplanes circling, some roaring overhead merely to advertise the radio and television stations carrying the golf tournament.

Recent letters published here contain suggestions that the Carmel City Council may be too preoccupied with visual austerity as "do something" means of salvaging Carmeline ambiance. However, a very large part of Carmel's splendor is its relatively low background noise level and freedom from such irritating noise transcients mentioned above.

The past few days I have noticed as never before the rumble of jets and the constant droning of propeller planes, honking horns and screaming sirens; traffic jams and noxious fumes.

Was it merely four days of light-hearted merriment, only a tribute to "der Bingel?" Was it an opportunity for the wealthy faithful to fly their private planes (travel expenses deductible for the charity) over Carmel from all over the continent? Perhaps it was local flyers enjoying the unusually beautiful weather.

Was it something we can continue to shrug off or is the increasing noise level really here to stay?

Perhaps with the help of our city government the citizens of Carmel should explore our options to halt this invasion of our auditory and olfactory integrity.

Doggie crackdown?

Dear Editor:

Last week I decided not to listen to my mistress. I checked out my usual block in town, then I decided to visit the Carmel Library—just checking how it was on the other side of the street.

—Bang—I got arrested! Someone called the police—thought I was lost and hurt.

As a matter of fact this is a trick of mine.

As soon as I feel things are not going too well, I will develop tired feet and a limp.

The policeman, who by the way was very nice, brought me to the SPCA Shelter, which is about a good 20 minutes drive out of town.

Wonder how much that ride cost the City of Carmel? Just estimate it at $50. I know it cost my mistress $30 to get me back.

OK. Complaint of arrest: Sniffing around without a leash $15; no dog license, $15.

And that is not all—my mistress nearly had a nervous breakdown and got a $3 parking ticket looking for me.

And now the latest news is that they're thinking about not letting us stroll along Carmel Beach. If they ever do, wonder for what I'll get arrested then—hold it! I guessed it—littering.

I THOUGHT THAT the First Amendment was "reserved" for the Fourth Estate, but Councilman Brown seems an advocate of its use. He refuses to divulge his sources of "complaints from residents about Jack (Collins) ... three or four times a month." Just what are these alleged complaints?

Frankly, I feel that Brown should be waving the Fifth Amendment banner, as everything he says tends to incriminate him.

ALSO LOVED BROWN'S comment on annexation reaction by Carmel residents: (according to Brown, a 50/50 split): "The problem is, people are coming from an emotional level instead of basing their opinions on the facts."

Speaking for yourself, John?

ONE YEAR AGO, I figured out the cost to the city of the chemical toilets. At the time of installation of same, the weekly maintenance of each was $34.98. There were four city privies (not the ones at Carmel Plaza). This was a cost of $139.92 a week; $559.68 a month; $6,716.16 a year.

They have been in place almost two years, so have cost us over $12,000.

If our council had used that same money wisely, we would now have half, if not all, of a proper public facility built.

Let's face it. If our money is going down the drain, then it should go down a drain.

REMEMBER BROWN'S COMMENT a few weeks ago about "one second-story business owner that lost his shirt," the inference being that the only reason he did so was because the business was located on a second story.

Don't you think a more pertinent statement might be made based on the facts of the last 30 years, which include the failure or success of first-floor businesses as well?

Location is a factor in success or failure, but more important factors are type of business, quality of product, and most important, business experience. Carmel's business history is full of fast turnovers, of all kinds and locations. Maybe Mr. Brown should base his remarks and votes on City Hall records, which clearly delineate how many first-floor and second-floor businesses (including Ocean Avenue ones) have lost their shirts in the last 30 years.

I knew a lot of them.

FRIENDS OF OURS, who own a business, tried hard, a few years ago, to totally sponsor a string sextet to play weekly concerts within the city, open-air, as a gift to the city.

They ran afoul of the music/bar ordinance, even though everyone at City Hall tried to help.

Turned out that they could go ahead with their plans if every restaurant/bar within 100 yards was closed to business for two hours preceding, during, and two hours following the concert.

That's why you haven't heard the sextet playing.

HE WAS A NATIVE, bred and born. Small, loving, playful, and feisty. He was one of the masses, not generally deserving of attention, spoken of usually with contempt. But to those who knew him, he was unique, an individual worthwhile and deserving ... a giver, of time and love. Trusting, also ... he put his life in your hands, literally. But if you did something to him that was not fair, he let you know his displeasure in no uncertain terms.

His name was Chipper. He died this week. And though his life was short, he brought more companionship and brightness to those who knew him than do many human beings. His "Cheer-up" made everyone do so.

He was one of God's least creatures, who showed his greatness, and we are happy to have known him.

He was a sparrow.

Odello development stirs old feelings

By AL EISNER

DID YOU GET a distinct feeling of deja vu when you saw the development plans for the Odello artichoke ranch at the Carmel River and Highway 1? Those folks who were in Carmel around 1970 will recall vividly the bitter struggle to preserve the western half of the Odello property and prevent the construction of a mammoth hotel/condominium project.

The resolution came when an unprecedented community fund-raising campaign raised some $300,000 for the purchase of the property. Those funds were given to the state, which purchased the land for eventual park use.

Now the Odellos have come forth with plans for the development of the eastern half of the property. The future of that project is equally clouded.

There has been a distinct shift in public awareness of the effects of such large-scale development on the environment. Politically, we have seen a shift on the county Planning Commission and Board of Supervisors. And, finally, since the property lies within 1,000 yards of the coast, the Odellos will have to contend with the Coastal Commission.

Next Wednesday, the planning commission will try to determine whether or not it should give approval to a Specific Plan for the project. The proposal that seems to have the most currency calls for a 200-room hotel, 97 condominiums and a farmer's market. Seventy acres would be set aside for the growing of artichokes.

The Odellos are aware that the community is watching the plan closely. They feel that they are entitled to reasonable development on the 134-acre parcel, pointing to dense residential and commercial growth all around them. And, they say, if the community doesn't like its plans, then the property should be purchased and kept as a greenbelt.

The plan recommended by the consultants hired by the county to assist in preparation of a Specific Plan is very similar to the Odello Land Agricultural Land Preservation System proposed by the Odellos almost a year ago. If it is accepted in concept, an environmental impact report would then be prepared.

It looks like the Odellos and opponents of the project are hunkering down for a prolonged battle. The public will have a chance to comment at many of the various stages the development must go through.

Next Wednesday's meeting will probably be only the first of many public hearings on the controversial question. If the community is to be served, then the public will have to become acquainted with the issues and make its feelings known.

Appreciates Foundation

Dear Editor:

Are there older folks about whose steps are yet lively? Whose smiles come more often? Whose minds are keenly alert and whose interests are surprisingly varied?

Can you notice here and there and everywhere on the Monterey Peninsula elderly people of many acquaintances and more than average amount of friends? Whose membership in a certain organization is valued greatly? Whose remaining years are enlivened by its sympathetic and helpful concern for them?

If one answers all these questions with a resounding "Yes," the person is bright. And, if he knows not only the name of the organization of senior citizens but also the words inscribed on a bronze tablet before the entrance to one of its buildings, the individual is very bright.

These are the inscribed words: "The Carmel Foundation functions with the spirit and concern of a good and thoughtful neighbor. It has no message to deliver, no creed to preach and supports no political theory. It strives to bring into the lives of the members a measure of dignity, serenity, comfort and companionship."

Can there exist a heart that doesn't beat more proudly as such sentements? Perhaps someone with a high IQ, however, can exclaim: "What!" The Foundation has no message? No creed? No political theory?"

No so! It is as clear as daylight that it is trying to practice the "Golden Rule." God bless it!"

"Grapestake" nightmare?

Dear Editor:

Regards to "View Through a Grapestake Fence" Jan. 11th:

I hope he doesn't do any more speculations ... give one the horrors. Whatever did you eat the night before to have such a nightmare? That Plaza should never have been built in Carmel in the first place.

You're not using Pat Hathaway's pictures again? I know he couldn't have run out ... impossible.

Councilmen back down on Collins

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

CITY ADMINISTRATOR Jack Collins will not lose his job or his authority over city employees.

Just as suddenly as the controversy erupted three weeks ago, it died early this week when four city councilmen stated they do not want to strip Collins of his job or his crucial hiring and firing powers.

Only Councilman Mike Brown now remains uncommitted. "I still have to think about it," he said Tuesday morning. But Councilman Leslie Gross told the Pine Cone on Tuesday morning that he thinks Collins "should keep" his personal authority.

In a vote of confidence at Monday night's regular council meeting, three other council members said the ordinance that empowers Collins is sound. Support came from Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilmen Howard Brunn and Helen Arnold.

An ad hoc committee of two councilmen will be appointed to study Collins' future role, but major changes to the ordinance that empowers him are unlikely.

Collins never stated publicly what he would do if his role as chief employer was weakened. But two city officials confirmed Collins told them he would quit if his powers were diluted.

"I would decide what to do about that only if and when the council acts," Collins said Tuesday morning.

THE COUNCIL and some of the audience exchanged sharp words at an emotionally charged session Monday evening. An overflow crowd of vigorous Collins supporters showed up in the council chambers. The audience of 160 was paraded down to Sunset Center, where the meeting was rescheduled in Carpenter Hall.

When the session ended, Collins' future appeared bright. The question of his job definition was shuffled off to an unnamed committee.

In a crucial vote to reaffirm the intent of the ordinance that empowers Collins, Norberg surprised the audience and the council by backing the law he helped create two years ago.

"Thataboy, Gunnar," a call rang out from the partially stunned audience.

An additional vote of confidence was made the morning after the session.

Councilman Leslie Gross, who voted in favor of the job re-evaluation, said Collins should retain his hiring and firing powers.

"Sure, I go along with Jack (Collins) keeping those powers," Gross said in a telephone interview Tuesday morning.

That statement apparently gives Collins at least a four-fifths vote of confidence. Although councilmen insisted it is the job—not the man—that is being re-evaluated, some skeptics question that.

Councilman Mike Brown now appears to be the lone lawmaker interested in a revamp of Collins' role.

Gross said he is concerned only with the "general wording" of the present ordinance. "I couldn't reaffirm it. I think there are errors in it," he said. Gross said Collins should report in writing to the council. He objects to Collins' verbal recommendations, "during the time we are trying to meditate over the issues," he said.

THE FUNCTION of the unappointed ad hoc committee appears blurred at best. Two council members have already stated they do not want to serve on it.

After the session, both Councilmen Howard Brunn and Gross asked not to be placed on the committee. Brunn said, "I don't believe in committees. My voice should be heard in open sessions."

Gross said those responsible for the original ordinance should form the committee. "I'm the new boy on the block," said Gross, who was appointed to the council in September.

Norberg must select from himself, Brown and Mrs. Arnold to fill the two ad hoc committee spots.

Asked when he would appoint the panel, Norberg said after the meeting, "Let's just say I'll do it when I get around to doing it." That committee could be appointed as soon as Tuesday evening's council session.

Questioned about the makeup of the ad hoc committee, Collins responded Tuesday morning, "I'm not as interested in the ad hoc committee as I am in the final actions the council takes." Collins said he was "encouraged" by Norberg's vote to reaffirm the ordinance that empowers him.

In a memorandum Collins read to the council, he said, "I have shortcomings and I will continue to try and correct them. I do not believe that any city administrator could serve the council, the residents, or his profession without personnel authority and responsibility."

His statement was backed by a letter of support signed by 11 members of Carmel's management team, including all the department heads and other high-ranking city employees.

The letter was read to the council by Police Chief William Ellis. Ellis was the first of 14 speakers Monday evening. He demanded the council's attention and spoke, even before Norberg consented to recognize him.

"We support ... Collins, and feel he is a true professional in the finest sense of the word. We request the council reaffirm its wise selection of this form of administration," the letter said, in part.

Support mounted for Collins, who sat quietly listening to present and former city officials praise him.

COUNCIL DISCUSSION was interrupted by a quick motion by Brunn to reaffirm the present ordinance that empowers Collins. It was seconded by Mrs. Arnold. Gross made a substitute motion to send Collins' job re-evaluation to committee.

Gross said the present ordinance gives Collins no direction.

"It was like giving a child a loaded shotgun and saying go outdoors," Gross said of the powers granted Collins two years ago.

"Oh, c'mon!" echoed an audience member.

"Just apologize, huh?" called another.

Brown seconded Gross' motion.

"Recall!" cried another voice from the full house.

Brunn turned to Norberg, "... You're on the hot seat," he said.

"Fish or cut bait, baby," prompted yet another voice from the crowd.

"Please withdraw your motion," Brunn asked Gross. "It's divisive," he said.

Gross would not. It passed on a 4-1 vote, with Brunn dissenting. Mrs. Arnold asked for a roll call vote on Brunn's original motion. That motion called for a reconfirmation of the ordinance that empowers Collins. It was a disguised vote of confidence for Collins.

Brown hesitated on his vote.

"We've got it whether we want it or not," Norberg said to Brown.

"Don't tell him how to vote," shouted someone in the room.

"Somebody better tell him," answered another voice.

"In this environment ... I have to vote no at this point," Brown said.

EXPLAINED BROWN Tuesday morning: "After we've looked at the job description, then is the appropriate time to decide on that (reaffirmation)."

Norberg, who called the motion "irrelevant," still voted for it, which left only Brown and Gross questioning the basic structure of the two-year-old ordinance.

Norberg was constantly taunted by the audience, during the tense session. He leveled criticism back at the crowd.

Shortly after the public had spoken, Norberg said, "I think there is some degree of confusion in what we are all about."

"Oh boy," moaned someone seated in the back of the room. The remark caused Norberg to lurch forward. His face reddened.

"I've served on the council intermittently since 1958. This is my fourth term ... I've had more experience than anyone else in this room with this form of government that's been more or less maligned regularly tonight," Norberg said.

Norberg said none of the council wanted to return to the "old form" of government by council committee. "And none of us seriously thought we were in a position to fire him (Collins) for what he had done," Norberg added. The reference was to Collins' promotion of Ron Warren to chief building inspector. The move was deferred the day after the council's complaints.

AN ANGRY AUDIENCE still had its say.

Bernard Anderson, a former mayor, challenged Norberg to act. "You handle the swing vote," he said to the mayor. "If you made a motion to table this, it would give Collins a rising vote of confidence."

Another former mayor, Eugene Hammond, said the council committee form of government was illegal. "It's not possible to legally go back to that," he said.

"Considering the kind of guy you've got (Collins), it would be a damn shame to let this blow up," Hammond warned.

Old Carmel, the residents' political lobby took no stand. But Ben Lyon, a founding member of Old Carmel and a Carmel resident, asked the council "to let the matter cool down or just be tabled."

Speaking for the Carmel Citizens Committee, William Doolittle, the president, warned, "Any action ... to reduce the city administrator's powers would be a step backwards and an unfortunate decision."

Olof Dahlstrand, another former councilman, compared the council to a company's board of directors. "Any board would be quickly ousted by its stockholders if it diddled with good management," he warned.

Even the Carmel Harrison Memorial Library Board voiced full support for Collins. Collins' office "must be free of politics," said Pat Sippel, the board president.

DR. DONALD DAVIDSON was the only member of the Carmel Planning Commission to speak. He said he supported Collins' present job definition. But he suggested an executive session for any discussion of Collins' job performance. The public and press are barred from such meetings where personnel matters are discussed.

Collins "must have the authority to select and appoint his staff," said Sergeant Thomas Frazier of the Carmel Police

MIKE BROWN is the only Carmel city councilman who has not offered his vote of confidence to City Administrator Jack Collins. Brown is a likely candidate to serve as a member of an ad hoc committee that may recommend changes in the job description for the city administrator.

Collins: "I have shortcomings and I will continue to try to correct them. I do not believe that any city administrator could serve the council, the residents or his profession without personnel authority and responsibility"

R-4 committee asks parking relaxation

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

A CITY-APPOINTED committee has recommended five ways to improve the economic feasibility of building apartments in a newly rezoned two-block section of Junipero Avenue.

If approved by the Carmel Planning Commission and City Council, the committee's recommendations would revise parking requirements so that more apartment units could be built on the available land.

But the committee's conclusions failed to placate disgruntled property owners who contend their lots were devalued when the council rezoned the area last August from commercial (C-2) to residential (R-4).

Planning Director Robert Griggs said the crux of the controversial rezoning is the high cost of building apartments in the area, which is bounded by Torres and Junipero, and Third and Fifth.

"Apartments just won't make it there—not now," Griggs said.

The reasons for this, he added, are spiraling construction costs that would ultimately result in higher rents once the units were built.

The council's zone change was designed to stop the spread of gift shops, motels and galleries in an area that has been called a buffer zone between the downtown business district and the residential district.

"Previously, the area was zoned a kind of commercial catch-all. The council felt the buffer zone should be more residential," Griggs said.

The rezoning triggered bitter complaints by property owners; and it was one of the reasons that caused former Councilman David Hughes to resign his council seat.

Last summer, residents in the area alleged that the rezoning on Junipero was aimed at a single site—to stop the proposed redevelopment of the Carmel Builders Supply lumberyard at Junipero and Fourth.

Tom Handley, the lumberyard owner, was planning to build a three-story commercial structure with underground parking. Handley contends the rezoning of his property has devalued it at least $1.5 million.

Handley was invited to participate as a member of the review committee, but after three sessions, "I blew my lid and didn't return," he said.

"I feel the way I always have," Handley told the Pine Cone Friday. "This city needs more motels, not less."

Still, he said, "The committee did a decent job. I just hope the council goes along with its recommendations."

AFTER FIVE WORK sessions, the committee last week released its recommendations designed to relax zoning restrictions that property owners claim make it uneconomical to build apartments in the area.

The new recommendations are:

- Halve the on-site parking requirements for studio apartments, requiring owners to provide only one parking space for every two units.
- Eliminate restrictions that count surface parking as lot coverage, allowing builders to use more of the land for apartments.
- Allow garage openings to extend up to five feet above sidewalk level without counting the garage as a second story. At present, all parking must be below sidewalk level.
- Allow cars to back out from sites that are 8,000-square-feet or less.
- Add seven conditional uses to the 32 types of resident-serving businesses now allowed in the zone. These include: offices for dentists, doctors, psychologists, real estate agents, insurance salesmen and photographers. Woodworking facilities would also be allowed.

The recommendations will now be studied by the Carmel Planning Commission before expected council action in April.

But even with the new recommendations, there is no rush to build apartments.

"OH, I EXPECT apartments will be built there, but not tomorrow or the next day. In planning, you have to look at the 20-year picture," said Carmel Councilman Leslie Gross.

As a planning commissioner, he proposed the rezoning and drafted the ordinance two years ago. He told the Pine Cone he will approve the committee's recommendations.

"It is still pretty much the buffer zone I visualized," Gross said.

Even with the new recommendations, two members of the committee are pessimistic about the economic feasibility of building apartments in the Junipero area.

"This buffer zone is a red herring. My business is surrounded by other businesses. Now, what the hell am I buffering?" asked Joe McEldowney, who has owned property here for 40 years. He owns lots occupied by dental and real estate offices at Junipero near Fifth.

McEldowney, a member of the ad hoc committee, claims the council's "down-zoning" devaluated his property by $50,000.

"I'm glad we worked on the thing, but all they (the committee) came up with were recommendations to pacify us. The whole damn thing should never have been rezoned in the first place," McEldowney said.

"I'm not opposed to the idea, it's just that the rezoning was done in such an isolated spot," said John Gamble, also a committee member. He owns the Junipero Professional Building on Junipero and Fifth.

Gamble, a Carmel Highlands resident, is a building designer. He said the "buffer zone" should surround the entire business district. "That includes the San Carlos Street office of a planning commissioner," Gamble said. He was referring to the office of Robert Stephenson, a building designer and the commission chairman. His office is on San Carlos near Fourth Avenue.

Stephenson said he would approve further rezoning of buffer zones surrounding the Carmel business district.

"I'd go along with it. I'd rezone my property ... I'd like to rezone the entire C-1-S district (service commercial district that surrounds the business zone) to R-4," Stephenson said.

"If anything is built in the R-4 zone, apartments are the logical things," Stephenson said.

MELVIN KLINE, one property owner likely to build apartments in the zone, said he probably will do so "if the planning commission and the council don't monkey around with the changes we've proposed."

Kline owns the 5,000-square-foot lot next to the Junipero Professional Building and across the street from the police station on Junipero Avenue.

Although he has owned the lot for six years, he has never built on it. He said he plans to build apartments but he is waiting for the "right opportunity."

Kline, who lives in Carmel Knolls, said he was "surprised" by the committee's progress. To him the recommendations represent "a reasonably good compromise."

"The present restrictions would have prevented anyone from ever building apartments there," he added. "This is the first time in my experience with the city that such a diverse group of people worked together to do something sensible."

Traffic violations up sharply; other crime down in Carmel

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

CRIME IN CARMEL was sharply reduced last year, according to the 1978 Carmel Police Department report released last week.

A traffic enforcement crackdown resulted in a record number of drunk driver arrests in 1978. Also, the number of auto collisions dropped. This was attributed, in part, to a state-funded traffic control program within Carmel, Police Chief William Ellis said.

Narcotics arrests were down 50 percent. There were 23 percent fewer burglaries. (out of the 60 homes and businesses burglarized last year, only one arrest was made, the report revealed.)

Total arrests in Carmel plunged 63 percent. The figure dropped from 2,256 arrests in 1977 to 838 in 1978. A new computerized traffic warrant system the county began last year was credited for this drop by Chief Ellis.

Under this new program, Ellis said, hundreds of outstanding traffic warrants are processed by the county instead of by local authorities.

The traffic safety program began in January 1978. The state granted $40,174 for an additional officer and patrol car.

Two months after the program began, an inquiry revealed that accidents had not decreased and the number of arrests remained stable.

But statistics released this month indicate that drunk driving arrests soared 13 percent, while reported traffic collisions fell 12 percent.

In 1978, nearly twice as many citations were issued here for speeding and stop sign violations as in 1977, the report said.

TOTAL TRAFFIC CITATIONS set another record high. Police issued 53,512 citations last year as compared to 52,550 handed out in 1977. Parking tickets account for about 85 percent of all traffic citations issued.

Most of the drunk driving arrests are made during Friday and Saturday late night hours. The traffic safety officer generally patrols from 7 p.m. until 3 a.m., Ellis said.

State funding for the safety officer program was cut in half this year. The city picked up the other half of the tab. By 1980, the city fathers must either pay the full bill or drop the program.

After a year of leniency, five tour bus drivers were cited by traffic officers in 1978, the report said. Four of the buses were found off the two-year-old tour bus route. Another was cited for parking too long in the commercial district, Ellis explained.

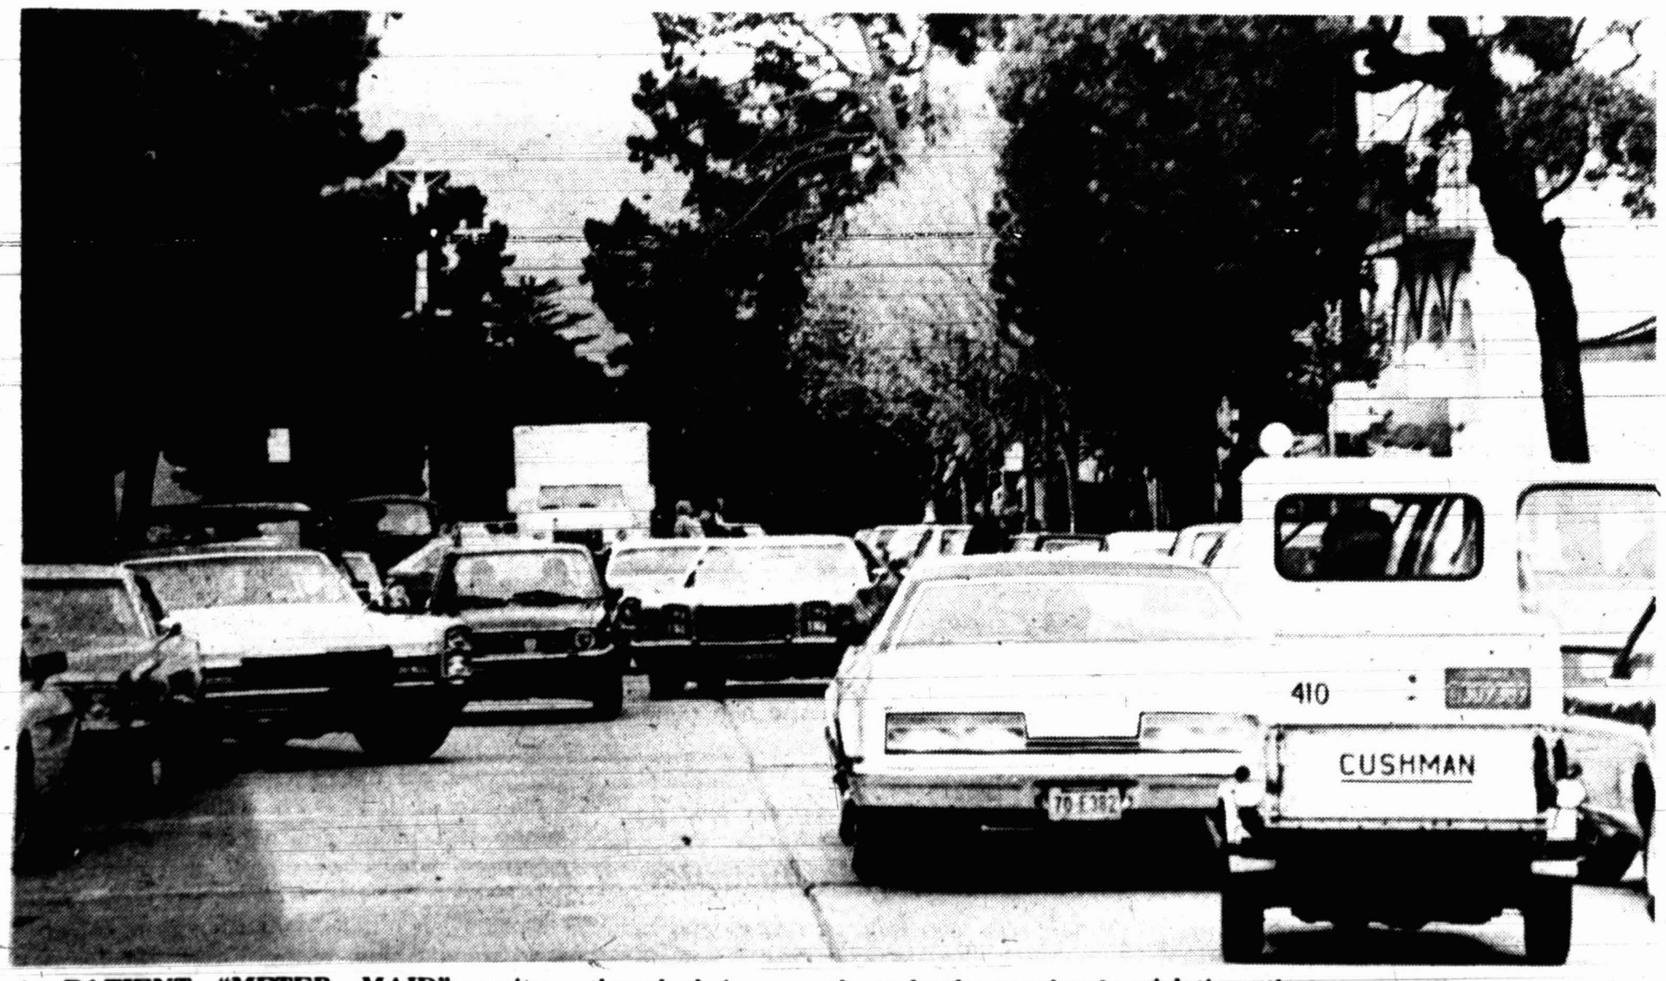
ALTHOUGH NARCOTICS arrests decreased from 40 in 1977 to 20 last year, citations for possession of less than one ounce of marijuana numbered 95 last year and 90 in 1977. The misdemeanor is punishable by fines of up to $100, Ellis said.

In November, Carmel had its second recorded bank robbery. More than $1,200 was stolen from the United California Bank branch on Ocean and Lincoln. The suspect was apprehended in Florida last month and is now in federal custody.

A citizens' ride-along program began in April. Residents can ride in patrol cars with policemen during day or evening shifts. The program was initiated to improve public relations between residents and police.

Some 25 residents have participated since April. Anyone interested in the ride-along should contact Captain Robert Fischer at the police department.



A PATIENT "METER MAID" waits behind a double-parked auto on Lincoln south of Ocean, while other motorists thread their way through the weekend traffic maze. The alert police department issud 53,512 citations for traffic and parking violations last year—a record number. Most were for overtime parking. (Photo by Kirk McClelland)

Odello development hearing Wed.

A PROPOSAL for the development of the Odello East property at Highway 1 and the Carmel River will have its first public hearing before the Monterey County Planning Commission Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 14.

The commission will hear a report on the draft Specific Plan for the 134-acre parcel, presented by the Sausalito consulting firm which prepared the document.

The hearing is planned at 3 p.m. in the Monterey County Board of Supervisors' chambers, Church and Alisal streets, Salinas.

The Specific Plan draft recommends development of a 200-room hotel, 97 condominiums, a farmers' market complex and access roads on 39 acres of the property. Another 70 acres of land would be retained in permanent agricultural use and 25 acres along the Carmel River would remain as open space.

Other alternatives discussed in the draft range from no development—keeping all the land for agricultural use—to construction of a maximum 156 homes and a 200-room hotel. The property east of Highway 1 and south of the Carmel River is now planted in row crops.

The commission has until the middle of March to review the draft plan and report back to the supervisors on the development alternatives it believes are acceptable.

The supervisors would then authorize an environmental impact report on the acceptable proposals. Once that report is complete and certified by the board, the Specific Plan would go back to the planning commission for further hearings and adoption. Development on the property also is subject to approval by the Coastal Commission, since the land lies within the boundaries of the coastal zone.

The hearing on Feb. 14 will be informational, according to Planning Director Ed DeMars, but also will deal with the merits of the different alternatives, he said. He encouraged public testimony at the hearing.

THE DRAFT PLAN, presented to the supervisors last month, has not yet been presented formally to the commission.

The plan is virtually identical to the Odello family's own Agricultural Land Preservation System (ALPS) plan proposed last May. The Specific Plan draft differs by creating the 25-acre open space corridor along the Carmel River and moving the proposed hotel away from the levees and dikes along the river.

Sabastian Bordonaro, architect for the ALPS proposal, said the family will try to move the hotel back to the original location.

He said he believes the hotel would be less obtrusive if it is built against the river dikes, than if it is constructed on flat land along the property's Highway 1 frontage.

The consultants with Williams, Platzek and Mocine, who prepared the draft plan, made the change because they said preservation of plant and animal life along river corridors is required by Coastal Commission policies.

The Odello ALPS plan called for a footbridge across the river leading to several "honeymoon cottages" in the area designated for open space with public trail access.

Annexation protest hearing

AN ANNEXATION PROTEST hearing for residents of Carmel Woods and Hatton Fields has been scheduled on March 19 at 8 p.m. at Sunset Center.

The Carmel City Council set the protest hearing date Monday evening despite unrelenting arguments from Councilman Mike Brown. Brown wanted the city staff to prepare an economic impact report on the proposed annexation. The rest of the council said no.

For the protest hearing, opponents of annexation must gather signatures of 25 percent of the registered voters and property owners in the two affected areas to force an election. If more than 50 percent of the registered voters oppose the idea, the issue fails without an election.

Brown complained that an annexation report prepared six months ago by staff was outdated because it included the Mission Fields and Carmel Point areas.

Those areas were excluded from annexation consideration in November by the Monterey County Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO).

"We still do not know the costs," Brown said.

Councilman Howard Brunn said the council was legally bound to set the protest hearing date. "We've talked about this at many meetings for many hours. If God wanted a pig to fly, he'd give him wings," Brunn said to Brown.

"But let's see if people want this pig to fly," Brown responded.

ALTHOUGH THE COUNCIL voted unanimously for the protest hearing date, Brown still argued for a new staff report.

"The staff doesn't make those final budget decisions, the council does," declared City Administrator Jack Collins.

"You know what the city will need to provide the same level of services," Brown said.

"It's arbitrary," Norberg interrupted. "We are the ones who decide. What other facts are there we can get that we haven't got?"

"No matter what the staff does," Brunn said to Brown, "there won't be enough data to satisfy you." Brunn said an additional staff report, "would be mandating an exercise in frustration."

Last month the LAFCO board rejected a bid by the council to restore the proposed annexation to the original boundaries.

Brown has staunchly defended the rights of Carmel residents to vote on the annexation issue. Because it would not increase the assessed valuation or number of Carmel residents by 50 percent, Carmel residents have no voice, according to state law.

Hearing tonight on boundary revision for coastal zone

A hearing to decide if the coastal zone boundaries for Carmel and other Monterey County cities should be changed is scheduled for tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Pacific Grove.

The hearing, convened by Assemblyman Henry Mello (D-Watsonville), will be the first of three to review the boundary lines in Monterey and Santa Cruz counties.

It will take place at the auditorium of Robert H. Down Elementary School, 485 Pine Avenue.

A future hearing will deal with changes in the coastal zone boundaries for areas outside the limits of incorporated cities. This includes the Lower Carmel Valley, Del Monte Forest, Carmel Highlands and the Big Sur coast.

After the hearings, Mello will introduce legislation to enlarge or reduce the extent of the coastal zone in different portions of the two counties.

Land within the coastal zone is subject to planning restrictions of the 1976 Coastal Act and is under the jurisdiction of the Coastal Commission. There have been discussions in the past about reducing the perimeters of the coatal zone in the north end of Monterey County and of possibly expanding the zone boundaries in Carmel.

Monterey Bay ecology talk

A slide/lecture on The Ecology of Monterey Bay will be narrated by Charles Baxter, senior lecturer at Hopkins Marine Station, on Friday, Feb. 9 at Monterey Peninsula College. The program is part of the Knowledge Update lecture series Friday afternoons at 1:30 p.m. in art room 9. Admission is free.

The slide program shows the kelp forests and the varied bay life studied by marine biology students at the station.

Baxter's specialities are ecology, marine biology and vertebrate biology. He has been a lecturer at Stanford University since 1970 and with the Hopkins Marine Station at Mussel Point in Pacific Grove since 1974. Baxter is a member of the planning group for the proposed Monterey Bay Aquarium. He received his master's degree from UCLA.

For more information on Knowledge Update, contact Bea Siegel, 649-1150, ext. 451.

Father Farrell's wisdom

By the REV. LARRY FARRELL
The Jan. 24 Invocation delivered to the Carmel Rotary Club

Today's news tells us that the British Isles are suffering the worst strikes and the most devastating blizzard in their history. The trials of Job are afflicting them and Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II, like Job, calls on her subjects to go on trusting in Almighty God's goodness and His Divine Providence.

She recalls her grandfather, George V, and his faith in the face of disaster and she rebroadcasts the words of her father, George VI, in the time of trial.

Here they are: "I said to the man who stood at the gate of the years, give me light that I may tread safely into the unknown and he replied 'Go out into the darkness and put your hand into the hand of God. That shall be to you better than light and safer than the known way.' "

O Lord, may we accept that advice and finally may we remember that when we are being swept off our feet, it's time to get on our knees.

The Jan. 31 Invocation delivered to the Carmel Rotary Club

Dr. Daniel Poling wrote these words soon after his son was killed in World War II:

"I do not ask, O Lord, a life all free from pain. I do not seek to be in this vast world of need, without my load of care. For this, I know, the Cross is my eternal gain and he who struggles on at last shall enter in and be victorious there.

"So, Lord, just keep me fit within and give me strength to fight, and I shall carry through the din, from darkness up to light."

Finally, O Lord, may we realize that the future of mankind is not so much dependent on what happens in outer space as in what happens in inner space—the space between our ears."

The Jan. 27 Invocation delivered to the Carmel Business Association

Help us, O Lord, to go on thanking thee for the great privilege of living and working in Carmel-by-the-Sea, an area smiled upon by thy Divine Providence.

However, this honor entails obligations both to thee and to our fellow citizens. May we see to it that business and beauty, trade and tradition walk hand in hand in peace. They are not irreconcilable if men of goodwill search for solutions with kindness and sympathy.

Yesterday I came across a 1774 letter written by our first citizen, Padre Junipero Serra, to his excellency Don Antonio de Bucarelli, the Viceroy of Mexico.

"This year's harvest of wheat and barley is plentiful—but at the height of the harvest a great school of sardines filled Carmel Bay and the Indians left the fields to fish. A compromise was reached. The Indians became farmers in the morning and fishermen in the afternoon."

Padre Serra sent a barrel of sun-dried and salted sardines to the Viceroy, a gift, both appreciated and duly acknowledged, and the first record of California International trade, now in the millions, began in Carmel 205 years ago. Serra also tells the Viceroy that delays in founding new missions left him with extra padres so he put them to work as farmers, vaqueros, gardeners. He adds, "The holy purpose of their labor is pleasing in the sight of God, of angels and of men."

May this be said of our work as well, O Lord, like Serra may our aims soar on the wings of vision but let our feet always remain on the solid rock of reality.

Finally, may we all be to Carmel like a woman toward the man she loves: she will do anything except stop criticizing and trying to improve him.

HONOR ROLL STUDENTS NAMED

CARMEL, CARMEL VALLEY and Pebble Beach residents were among 80 students named to the honor roll for their academic performance for the first semester at Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach.

Carmel students earning a 3.5 grade-point-average or higher were: John Bradley, Darren Bellatti, Tina Meckel and John Wozencraft, all freshmen; sophomores David Drummond, Stephanie Kaku, Liza Lockwood, and Michelle Ramsey; Susan Goodhue, Emeric McDonald, Rebecca Paravicini, and Jim Stephenson, all juniors; and senior Carol Nickbarg.

Carmel Valley students named were: Carol Cunningham and Richard Foote, both sophomores; and senior Sam Davidson.

Pebble Beach students named were: freshmen Andy Bower, Diana Marks, Erin McFadden and Tim Powell; Anne Calhoon, Elizabeth Hopkins, Chris Lord and Phil Schneidewind, all sophomores; juniors Ann Bomberger, Lisa Barker, Ken Moller, Michael McFadden and Cheryl Sailer; and seniors Lloyd Calhoon, Sydney Mitchell, Pipo Nguyen-Duy, Chris Platzer, David Rodeback and Chris Totten.

Is there a doctor in the house? 2,000 here for meetings

Those are indeed "the doctors" you see everywhere in town! Approximately 2,000 physicians are back in Carmel for the Western Society for Clinical Research convention. The group has returned each February for more than 20 years.

Delegates are members of the Western Society of Physicians; the Western Society for Pediatric Research; the Western Society for Clinical Research; the Western Section of the American Federation for Clinical Research; and the Western Regional Society for Investigative Dermatology.

Meetings, lectures and symposia are scheduled at the Golden Bough Theatre, the Carmel Woman's Club, Boy Scout House, Church of the Wayfarer and Sunset Center.

The physicians fill most of the hotel and motel rooms in town during their three-day stay.

And since the delegates are all engaged in research, it's not really a good time to ask "Is there a doctor in the house?"

Supervisors to hear appeal Feb. 27 on use permit for Carmel Valley Ranch

The action of the Monterey County Planning Commission which granted a use permit to build 140 townhouses at Carmel Valley Ranch will be appealed to the Board of Supervisors Feb. 27 at 1: 30 p.m.

The board Tuesday accepted the appeal filed by the Carmel Area Coalition, Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and the City of Carmel.

The appeal challenges the permits granted by the planning commission on the grounds that traffic, sewage and water problems that might be created by the project have not been answered as required by the specific plan for the development.

At the same hearing, the supervisors will consider approving the tentative subdivision map for the first residential phase of development on the property at Robinson Canyon and Carmel Valley roads.

The total project covers 1,700 acres. It proposes construction of 500 homes, a 100-room resort hotel, an 18-hole golf course and a 12-court tennis club. Construction on the golf course is underway and the tennis club is nearing completion.

Text of appeal by property owners, coalition, city

APPEAL TO: The Board of Supervisors of the County of Monterey.

FROM: Resolution No. 79-31 of the Planning Commission of the County of Monterey, granting Use Permit No. 2271 to Carmel Valley Ranch.

BY: Carmel Area Coalition, Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, Calif.

The Board of Governors of Carmel Area Coalition, at its regular meeting on January 14, 1979, voted to take this appeal; the Board of Directors of Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, at its meeting of January 17, 1979, voted this appeal; and the Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, California, voted that it join the appeal at its meeting, January 29, 1979.

The foregoing persons, jointly, hereby appeal Resolution No. 79-31 of the Planning Commission of the County of Monterey, granting Use Permit No. 2271 to Carmel Valley Ranch, passed and adopted January 10, 1979, written notice of which decision was mailed to the applicant on January 22, 1979.

This appeal is made and based upon the following points:

(1) The Planning Commission committed error, abused its discretion, and acted contrary to the public interest as follows:

a. Water. The Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan requires that the Tularcitos Aquifer be proved prior to the approval of any permit for the project.

b. Road Construction. The Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan requires that, prior to the approval of the first increment of residential units, the developer enter into an agreement with the County to financially participate in the construction of the Carmel Valley-Robinson Canyon Road intersection, and of Carmel Valley Road to four lanes between Via Petra and Robinson Canyon Road, the developer to be credited against the road widening, if required to pay all of the cost for the intersection.

c. Sewage. The conditions with respect to sewage are so vague and speculative as to constitute an abandonment of the public interest. Further, said conditions open the door for the creation of another level of government specifically for the benefit of this particular developer creating serious problems for the county government and the taxpayer.

(2) The Planning Commission committed error, and abused its discretion, in finding that the conditions placed on the Use Permit adequately mitigate any adverse environmental effect.

(3) The Planning Commission committed error, and abused its discretion in that the facts do not support the findings made.

4. The Planning Commission committed error, and abused its discretion in that the findings of fact made do not support the decisions reached.

FURTHER COMMENT
ON THE ABOVE POINTS FOLLOWS:

I. A. Water

The Specific Plan Requires Proving the Tularcitos Aquifer Before Approval Of Any Permit.

The plan with which we are concerned is Amended Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan, revised November 3, 1976, the date of its adoption by Resolution 76-514 of the Planning Commission of the County of Monterey, and revised December 7, 1976, the date of its adoption by Board Order of the Board of Supervisors of the County of Monterey, in which form it was further adopted by Resolution 77-3 of that board on January 3, 1977.

We are directly concerned with that portion of the plan entitled: Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan Amended Conditions of Approval which commences on Page 27, running through Page 33, and, it ought to be noted, speaks in mandatory language. Its preamble leaves little doubt of its nature:

Assuming that the Carmel Valley Ranch meets all the requirements of a Specific Plan as determined by Section 65451 of the Government Code, it should be emphasized that the Specific Plan is a beginning step and that all future use will require permits including but not limited to Use Permits, Preliminary and Tentative Subdivision Maps or both, and that the following conditions shall be applied to any pertinent permit or approval made in connection with this project.

The conditions having to do with "Water Supply" commence on the upper portion of Page 30. Subparagraph C. 1. indicates that California-American Water Company or another water company may provide the water supply, but subparagraph 3. particularly names the Tularcitos Aquifer:

3. "Source of water for the water company shall be sought from domestic wells penetrating the Tularcitos Aquifer and approved by the Director of Environmental Health with regard to quantity and quality. Adequate evidence of sustained pumping capacity (minimum of continuous one week pump test) and of chemical and bacteriological quality shall be submitted for review and approval before any other plans are approved or securing of any permits beyond the Specific Plan ..."

What could be clearer than that?

The language of the paragraph itself, and of the footnote to it, make crystal clear that this water source must be proved before "any development on the ranch property," the stated interpretation of an earlier Board of Supervisors.

"The Planning Commission committed error, abused its discretion and acted contrary to the public interest"

"The water source must be proved before there is any development on the Ranch property"

I. B. Road Construction

The Specific Plan Requires, Before Approval of the First Residential Units, That Developer Agree With County to Financially Participate in the Carmel Valley-Robinson Canyon Intersection Construction and Widening of Carmel Valley Road.

The portion of the Conditions of Approval that relates to the road construction is Subparagraph 1. under Traffic Conditions, which follows directly after the preamble to the mandatory Conditions of Approval:

1. The developer shall enter into an agreement with the County of Monterey to financially participate proportionally in the construction of the Carmel Valley-Robinson Canyon Road intersection, and the construction of Carmel Valley Road to four lanes between Via Petra and Robinson Canyon Road (off-site road improvements). If the developer is required to pay 100 percent of the cost to construct this intersection, then the agreement will credit him with the portion that would have normally been paid by the County or others toward his portion of a four-lane Carmel Valley Road. This agreement shall be entered into prior to approval of the first increment of residential units.

Again, the language seems as clear as the water we would hope to produce from the Tularcitos Aquifer.

And, as the Use Permit and its conditions now ignore the Tularcitos Aquifer, so now also the road construction agreement.

These conditions were considered significant protections at the time of approval of the plan. As anyone then concerned can tell you, much time, labor, energy and thought went into their formulation. Have they now lost the mandatory character the plan so clearly gives them?

Reference to the road construction is also made, in general terms, on Page 14 of the plan, under Circulation. The language, however, is loose, and oriented, it would clearly appear, toward extracting the teeth in the Conditions of Approval.

It should be remembered that the Conditions of Approval, not only from their very nature, but also from their position later in the plan, by all reasonable rules of construction, should be deemed as controlling.

We would suppose that the Supervisors would not be taken in by this, as certain of the Planning Commissioners surely were.

I. C. Sewage

Sewage Handling Presents Serious Problems Not Adequately Considered in the Use Permit and Conditions.

As sketched briefly on Page 2 of this Notice, the Sewage question presents problems that the Use Permit appears not to treat adequately.

Because of the technical nature of the question, we have requested a professional opinion on the issue, which will be supplied to the Board, in written form, at a reasonable time prior to the hearing of this appeal, and which topic will be further orally addressed upon the hearing.

II. Findings of Mitigation of Adverse Environmental Effect and Omnibus Non-Detriment to Health, Safety, Peace, Morals, Comfort and General Welfare of Persons, Neighborhood and County.

These findings, the third and fourth on the Use Permit, appear to be in fulfillment of specific technical expectations of the ordinance as to use permits, and may have questionable foundation.

Much should be considered in order to make such general findings. In fact, such findings ought to have significance. But what they may well signify is that the body making the findings was not aware of any great public distress, and had not had a substantial outcry from the neighbors.

At the time that the plan was approved such distress and such outcry were manifest. The Conditions of Approval are dramatic witness of those concerns. Do we now ignore them?

Without going further, if we have a settling basin for sewage atop the Tularcitos Aquifer, the detrimental effect on environment and neighborhood begins to loom.

And with the operation of heavy equipment in the Carmel River bed, damage to that riverbed, the course of the river, crumbling walls requiring retaining reinforcement and detriment to the fauna of the river, as determined by the biologic reports mandated but never completed, all become accomplished fact.

And increased vehicular traffic over the Carmel Valley Road that should have been widened, and the Robinson Canyon Road intersection that should have been constructed, or undertaken—can anyone doubt the adverse effects?

Conclusion: It would appear manifest, and reason should compel the determination, that approval of this Use Permit was, to put it most gently and mildly, premature.

The Board of Supervisors should return the matter to the Planning Commission for a careful and comprehensive re-examination for compliance with the Conditions of Approval mandated by the Board when it passed and adopted the Specific Plan on December 7, 1976, and January 3, 1977.

January 30, 1979.

Subdividers seek 10 lots on 10 acres

SUBDIVIDERS OF A 10-acre parcel along the Carmel River are trying to find an acceptable way to put 10 homesites on their property and keep all of them out of the 100-year floodplain.

Rogclar Associates of Seaside, the developers, offered the new subdivision map for the property after the Monterey County Planning Commission appeared ready to delete three lots at its Jan. 31 meeting.

The three homesites the commission wanted to cut were located within the 100-year floodplain of the river.

The three developers—Roger Fulton, Clark Herbert and Harry Clarke—had been arguing the merits of their original proposal for almost an hour before they produced an alternate subdivision map.

This annoyed Commission Chairman Joseph Sullivan, who criticized them for wasting the commission's time rather than answering its concerns about floodplain construction.

Commissioners indicated at a hearing last December that they would not approve the three Rancho Bonita homesites closest to the river. They took the new plans under submission and continued the hearing until Feb. 28.

The subdivision is located on the south side of Carmel Valley Road, just west of the Valley Hills shopping area and Wolter's Hacienda Market. It is adjacent to the proposed Valley Hills subdivision (31 homes, 43 condominiums) to the west and the approved 15-lot Prado del Sol subdivision to the east. The property is zoned for single-family homes, one unit per acre.

At present, there are two rental houses on a corner of the land. The rest of the property is rocky river bottom terrain with a stand of eucalyptus trees at the south side, Fulton said.

The three Rogclar partners plan to live in three of the homes, to be designed by Monterey architect Paul Davis. The subdivision homes will range in size from 2,000 to 2,400 square feet.

DURING THE COMMISSION hearing, Fulton and his partners contended that floodwaters were unlikely to reach the three disputed homesites. In any case, they said, the houses could be "floodproofed."

Herbert said the group had tried several times to produce acceptable plans, moving the homesites from the floodplain; but could not get clearance from the county Health Department for septic tanks. The county requires a one-acre lot for a septic tank. The developers were trying to cluster the homes on smaller lots outside the floodplain.

The new subdivision map leaves each homesite on a one-acre lot, with the homes themselves situated past the high-water mark for a 100-year floodplain.

Fulton said the county has approved other houses closer to the river than any of the Rancho Bonita sites.

"Just because we made mistakes before doesn't mean we have to perpetuate it by making more mistakes," countered Commissioner Gary Varga of Carmel.

Only after the commissioners indicated they were prepared to reject the three lots did Fulton produce the redrawn map that takes all the houses out of the floodplain.

The new map will be reviewed by the county planning and health department staff before the commission considers it at its Feb. 28 meeting.

HARBINGER OF SPRING? These fragile blossoms appeared on a young fruit tree on a downtown Carmel street last week, much to the delight of passersby. Very shortly after that, acacias burst into golden bloom and spring was definitely in the air, despite chilly temperatures. The advent of spring should be most welcome in Carmel after one of the coldest winters on record. (Photo by Ken Peterson)

Minor injuries when car is sideswiped

A 33-year-old Carmel Valley woman sustained minor injuries Friday night when her car was sideswiped by an oncoming car on Carmel Valley Road.

Martha Eugenia Aldrich refused hospital treatment for her injuries following the 10:10 p.m. accident at Brookdale Drive, according to the California Highway Patrol.

The CHP said she was driving eastbound and rounding a curve at Brookdale, when a westbound car driven by Otela Silva of Carmel Valley crossed the center line, struck her vehicle and collided with a roadside fence.

No other injuries were reported.

Home design regulation tops Council agenda

HOW CARMEL HOMES may be designed or remodeled could be decided by the Carmel City Council next Tuesday evening.

A controversial proposal calling for design review of all new and remodeled two-story homes is scheduled for a public hearing before the council at 8 p.m.

Proponents claim design review of homes by the planning commission would be a deterrent to the building of large, two-story homes in Carmel.

Opponents say the design review would be an infringement on the rights of residents to design their own home.

Councilman Howard Brunn has already declared his opposition to the proposal. The other council members have not yet revealed their stand on the issue.

ALSO ON THE agenda Tuesday evening is a discussion about the name of the new post office still under construction in the Carmel Rancho area.

In January, a regional postmaster informed the council in a letter that the new edifice on Carmel Rancho Road will be called the Carmel Post Office. The one located at Fifth Avenue near Dolores will be renamed the Carmel-by-the-Sea branch, he said.

But the council has requested that the new office be named "Carmel Rancho." The council objected to a "commercialization" of the city's name. A town meeting in December attracted more than 100 merchants and residents, who argued over the proposed name.

A LONG-AWAITED report on Carmel's historical or noteworthy buildings is also slated for presentation Tuesday evening. Richard Janick, an instructor of architecture at Monterey Peninsula College, has compiled the study for nearly two years.

The report will recommend which buildings in Carmel should be designated as "significant" because of design or historical reasons. Once placed in that category by the council, it would make it more difficult for these buildings to be condemned, replaced or remodeled.

THE COUNCIL is also scheduled to look at a proposal for a half-mile long walkway on the west side of Scenic Road. The raised, asphalt walkway would protect pedestrians from traffic, and also protect native vegetation along the cliff's edge.

The walkway would be five feet wide and stretch from Eighth Avenue to Santa Lucia. Cost estimates are still not available.

The proposed walkway has been recommended by the Carmel Planning Commission and the forestry commission.

A PROPOSED NEW surfaced parking area at the Forest Theater is also scheduled for council review. Under the proposal, the present dirt lot would be surfaced in asphalt, bordered by trees and native flowers. The proposal has been endorsed by the Carmel Cultural Commission.

Council to meet Tuesday next week

The second regular Carmel City Council meeting for February has been rescheduled from Monday, Feb. 12, to Tuesday, Feb. 13.

City Hall will be closed on Feb. 12 in observation of Abraham Lincoln's birthday. It will also be closed the following Monday, Feb. 19, which is George Washington's birthday.

Tuesday's council session is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. in council chambers at City Hall, Monte Verde near Ocean Avenue.

Task force members named

Five of eight members of a growth management task force were appointed Tuesday by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

The appointments included a former planning commission chairman and one of the leading attorneys for land developers in the Monterey County.

The board, on a 5-0 vote, also approved the list of goals the panel must accomplish before it reports back to the board on May 1.

Named to the task force were: Marit Evans, a former Monterey County Planning Commission chairman, nominated by the League of Women Voters; attorney Brian Finegan of Salinas, chosen by the Association of General Contractors of Monterey County; attorney Joseph Sullivan of Monterey, the current chairman of the planning commission, representing the commission; Ed Moncrief of Central Coast Counties Development Corporation, representing low-income housing groups; and Harry Foster, representing the Building and Trades Council of Monterey County.

Remaining to be appointed are a South County rancher by Supervisor Dusan Petrovic of King City, a representative of the board of supervisors, who will have no vote in task force actions. Those appointments will be made next Tuesday.

The board instructed the task force to report back with answers to questions in six specific areas:

- Is a proposed 1 percent growth rate appropriate for the county outside the incorporated cities? This would allow 947 new homes and apartments this year.
- How should the growth be allocated between eight different regions of the county—by past historical trends, by encouraging development in slow-growth areas or by using utility capacity as a limiting factor?
- How much of the growth quota should be set aside for low-cost housing?
- How can the county encourage more low- and moderate-cost housing?
- How can an allocation system take into account fluctuations in the housing market because of changing interest rates and other factors? What effect would the growth limit have on the construction industry?
- Should allocations be made at one time each year? How should the county make the allocations?

'Revolt' shoots down subdivision

Three development proposals for the creation of 13 building lots in Robles del Rio, near Carmel Valley Village, aroused the opposition of residents of the area worried about congestion and sewage problems.

Banding together as the "Robles Revolt," the residents succeeded in convincing the county Planning Commission that environmental problems should be overcome before any more lots are created in the Robles area.

Two of the developers appealed to the Board of Supervisors. The supervisors rejected their appeal. On Tuesday, the developer of the last subdivision withdrew his appeal—perhaps because he knew the outcome.

The supervisors rejected two other subdivisions in the immediate vicinity at a hearing in January. The hearing on the Steele-Cooper project, scheduled the same day, was continued until this week after the other developments were denied.

The three subdivisions would have created 13 housing sites on Calle de los Agrinemsors in the community on the south side of the Carmel River from Carmel Valley Village.

Neighbors argued that the inadequate road and water systems, coupled with fire protection and septic sewage disposal problems, require a ban on all future land divisions in the area. Only when those problems are solved should new development be considered, opponents of the project said.

They did not object to construction of homes on existing building sites, but to creation of new sites.

The Steele-Cooper project would have created three lots on a 22.8-acre parcel. The other proposals turned down were the three-lot Abraham Loefsky subdivision; and the seven-lot Vista Robles subdivision.

Council backs down

Department. Frazier spoke for two Carmel employees' associations.

Collins already lost power when Brown replaced him as the council representative to the Monterey Peninsula Refuse and Garbage Disposal District, charged Tom Nash, owner of Speedy Hauling Service. Nash, a Carmel resident, said "every other city" on the board is represented by its city administrator. The council voted to place Brown on the board in December.

"There's growing disenchantment with the actions of this council. There is a lot of talk of a recall," he said.

Ann Woolworth, a 25-year Carmel resident asked, "Why shouldn't a city administrator be reviewed by the council?"

The owner of La Playa Hotel, Bud Allen said he just paid the city $13,000 in room tax for the last quarter of 1978. "I suggest we give Mr. Collins a raise," he shouted.

Collins smirked. Brown sat expressionless.

"Give it all to Jack," someone cheered.

Carmel Valley vegetation study is meeting topic

A public hearing to discuss the Carmel Valley Vegetation Study along the Carmel River has been set for next Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Monterey City Council Chambers.

County Supervisor Michal Moore will conduct the hearing on the lengthy study prepared for the county Board of Supervisors.

"This study, which is more than 100 pages long, discusses the effects of sedimentation, erosion and the whole range of alternatives of the drawdown on the aquifer in Carmel Valley. It tries to project what effect this is having on the water table of the Carmel River," Moore told the Pine Cone.

Copies of the report may be reviewed at the Carmel City Hall, Monterey City Hall, Monterey Library and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District office in the Carmel Hill Professional Building on the Holman Highway.

Monterey City Hall is at Madison and Pacific streets.

Middle School students 'dig' applied arts classes

A blend of shop and arts classes

The applied arts classes offered at Carmel Middle School are only one of the new avenues open to students in the sixth through eighth grades.

Sixth graders are required to take a 10-week crafts course during their first year at Middle School. For the other three quarters of the year, they divide their time between art, music and health sections.

Ken Wiese has been teaching the crafts section for 25 years. Under his tutelage, students get their first experiences with ceramics, woodworking, metalwork, mosaics and plastics.

This blend of shop and art classes is required both for boys and girls. The co-ed approach to what has been regarded as male territory in other school districts is nothing new at Carmel. Wiese said the district has been "doing this ever since I've been here. It's one of the neat things about Carmel."

More than 100 students will pass through the classes this year; later, many will take advanced classes during their three years at Middle School.

Judge says there's confusion:

Carmel-by-the-Sea Realty must change

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA Realty must change its business name because it is too easily confused with Carmel Realty Co., Monterey Superior Court Judge D. Richard Barelli has ruled.

Barelli handed down the decision Jan. 24. His ruling culminates a two-year dispute between one of Carmel's oldest real estate firms and one of its youngest.

Barelli ruled that Carmel-by-the-Sea Realty, "has adopted a trade name that is confusingly similar ... and the relevant public is likely to be confused by the use of that name."

The ruling apparently puts more clout behind a policy adopted by the Carmel City Council in October 1977, forbidding the commercial use of the city's full incorporated name, "Carmel-by-the-Sea."

Under the apparent precedent set by this decision, a business called Carmel-by-the-Sea Cleaners, for example, could not be established here, because another business called Carmel Cleaners already exists.

"There is a mini-landmark decision here," said an ebullient Art Strasburger, vice-president and 50 percent owner of Carmel Realty Company.

"We felt from the start this was how it would turn out, and the judge agreed," Strasburger said.

"The courts are supposed to uphold the law ... I think the judge was in error," said William Pentony, vice president of Carmel-by-the-Sea Realty.

Pentony estimated the bitter lesson may have cost his company $23,000. At least $20,000 has already been spent establishing under the name Carmel-by-the-Sea Realty. Another $3,000 was spent in legal expenses, he said.

Carmel Realty Co. spent about $5,000 in legal costs, Strasburger estimated.

Pentony said he does not know if the decision will be appealed. The appeal would have to be filed with the First District Court of Appeals in San Francisco. Such appeals are very costly and often require a year or more before resolution.

THE DECISION supported Carmel Realty Co.'s contention that the two businesses could be confused.

A "substantial danger" exists, Barelli ruled, that the two names "may be used interchangeably."

Nearly two years spent creating the image of Carmel-by-the-Sea Realty has gone "down the drain," Pentony said. That name was originally selected because of its location near the Carmel-by-the-Sea Post Office, he said.

Pentony said that a new business name has not been selected.

In his estimation, confusion between the two businesses has been minimal, Pentony said. He only knows of six instances of customer confusion in nearly two years.

"Never has anyone bound for Carmel Realty bought property from us. We refer all their calls to them," Pentony said.

Strasburger countered that there is plenty of confusion. "We continue to get their mail and calls ... The other day a man came to our office for a key to a home sold to him from Carmel-by-the-Sea Realty," he said.

CARMEL REALTY CO. filed suit against Carmel-by-the-Sea Realty last May, one year after the new firm was established. It claimed trade name infringement.

The suit was filed after the issue was discussed at three hearings before the Carmel City Council. The council refused to choose sides. But it did set the policy outlawing future use of Carmel-by-the-Sea in a business name.

In July 1977, the Carmel Business License Review Board approved a license for Carmel-by-the-Sea Realty.

Carmel Realty Co. discovered the board action a week later and asked the new firm to change its name. On one occasion, Carmel Realty offered Carmel-by-the-Sea Realty $500 to defray the costs of changing its name, according to Strasburger.

There is only one other Carmel business that uses the city's full incorporated name — Carmel-by-the-Sea Veterinary Hospital on Torres and Fifth. Since the council's ban on the name was not retroactive, its name will not be changed.

Building Department reorganization plans stalled

Plans to reorganize the Carmel Building and Planning departments were stalled again Monday evening.

The Carmel City Council asked City Administrator Jack Collins to draw up reorganization plans for council consideration in April.

A reorganization plan devised last month by Carmel Mayor Gunnar Norberg was endorsed by Collins Monday evening. That plan calls for a single department head to supervise both departments.

"I would have hoped the city administrator would have come up with a plan that ignored all the other suggestions," said Councilman Leslie Gross.

Collins appeared surprised. "I'd be happy to develop my own plan," he said.

Besides Norberg's plan, the only other one presented to the council was devised by Robert Stephenson, chairman of the planning commission. His plan provides for a chief building inspector and one assistant in the planning department.

Neither plan appeared to satisfy the council.

Norberg said the council should "flesh out" his proposal. "It might be the best way to go," he said.

"Maybe Mr. Collins can think of a better way," argued Gross. The council voted 4-1 to direct Collins to develop a plan. The mayor dissented.

The status of the building department has been in doubt since Fred Cunningham, the former department chief, resigned in December. The appointment of his successor, Ron Warren, was deferred three weeks ago after councilmen accused Collins of thwarting efforts to restructure the city departments.

Funds approved for Doud Ranch acquisition

State purchase of nearly 3,000 acres of coastal land five miles south of Carmel has been approved by the California Board of Public Works.

The land, a four-mile stretch of property between Malpaso Creek in Carmel Highlands south to Garrapata Creek, was approved for purchase by the board Jan. 31 for eventual use as a state park.

State park officials have set no timetable for completing the acquisition of the land. The proposed park would straddle Highway 1, with 90 percent of the land on the west side of the scenic road, said Clyde Ray, Monterey district manager for the state Parks Department.

Most of the land—2,400 acres—belongs to the Doud Ranch Estate. The rest of the acreage is owned by five separate private citizens, Ray said.

There are no homes located in the proposed park area, Ray said.

According to Larry Paynter, information officer for the state Board of Public Works, the land will be purchased with funds from a $5.3 million parks bond act set aside in 1977 by the state Legislature to acquire the property.

Once the property is acquired, which Ray said could take between two to six years, improvements will be made to trails that, at present, are used by trespassers across private property to reach the ocean.

"There are about 100 trails there now. Many of them are quite dangerous," Ray said.

Other planned improvements include the installation of chemical toilets and garbage cans.

The park will include the one-mile stretch of Garrapata Beach.

"The area is very spectacular," Ray said. "You either let it go to the developers or you set it aside for the public and save its natural beauty."

The Public Works Board also approved acquisition of 31 acres for the south Monterey Dunes project. That park will include the curving beach on both sides of the Seaside Holiday Inn on Monterey Bay, six miles north of Carmel.

County wants action on growth management

By KEN PETERSON

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Board of Supervisors is determined to have a working growth management policy for the county by the end of the year.

The board appointed a seven-member task force on Tuesday to recommend an interim growth rate for the unincorporated areas of the county and guidelines for distributing that growth to eight geographical regions of the county.

In a series of actions on Jan. 30, that included creation of the task force, the board:

- Indicated it will make a growth management policy part of the county General Plan by July.
- Gave Planning Director Ed DeMars 30 days to bring in a budget for additional staff to do the initial work on the growth management system. The staff will set up guidelines for decision-making on county growth patterns and a method for allocating building permits among competing subdivision projects.
- Set a deadline to have the entire growth management system in effect by the end of this year.

The supervisors agreed to use the historical 1 percent growth rate for areas outside the cities as a general guideline for controlling new development. That means 947 new homes and apartments could be constructed in the county during this year. And if this growth rate is maintained, 1,000 new housing units would be added by 1980.

THE BOARD displayed surprising unanimity in its decisions. There was only one dissenting vote. Supervisor Michal Moore of Monterey voted not to accept the 1 percent rate as an interim guideline.

He said the figure "doesn't relate to anything but the market economy." He urged the board to base projected growth on limits imposed by school, road and sewer capacity, available water, and drainage restrictions.

A specific target goal should not be adopted until the supervisors know how it will be administered, Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck said.

The Carmel Valley Master Plan Committee has been grappling with the same process. The committee adopted a growth goal of 2,500 units for the next 20 years but cannot decide how to choose among competing projects. The panel has discussed a point system that rates developments by comparison to how well they comply with master plan policies. So far they have not worked out a satisfactory system. The supervisors plan to hire special consultants to help the county planning staff with the task. The budget for the project, which must be drawn up by March, will include the cost of hiring consultants.

IN ADDITION to the consensus among the supervisors, Planning Commission Chairman Joseph Sullivan said there appears to be a "general consensus" among the building trades representatives and the public that managed growth is desirable.

"Everyone seems to agree that there is a quality of life throughout the county that should be preserved," he told the supervisors Jan. 30 in presenting the commission recommendations on the growth policy.

People "don't want this to be an urban sprawl area," he said.

Testimony at the board hearing confirmed that assessment. But Ralph Games of the county Building Trades Council, said construction trade workers don't object to managed growth. "We're just a little nervous about how it's done."

Mrs. Shipnuck recognized those concerns. She proposed the task force study county growth to suggest where it should be allowed and how much should be allowed.

But, she said during the meeting, she wants the process to move swiftly.

Ninety days, she said in an interview last week, is enough time for the committee to do its work.

And 11 months is enough time for the county to have its growth management system in place, she added.

While other counties have taken as long as two years to do the same job, Mrs. Shipnuck said Monterey County is "starting at a much higher point" and has less work left to do.

Board Chairman Sam Farr of Carmel said Dec. 31 was a "reasonable time" to complete the task.

He said the job will take a "reorganization in the planning department" because "we're not trying to create a lot more red tape."

Both he and Mrs. Shipnuck believe additional staff for the department to do the job is a top priority.

One of the surprising board votes to proceed with growth management came from Supervisor Kenneth Blohm of Castroville. The staunchest property rights advocate on the board, he only expressed concerns over the fairness with which a growth goal would be administered.

And, he said, the rate of growth for rural areas should not be tied to the growth rate in the cities.

The planning commission proposal for a 1 percent rural growth rate was based on the combined rate in both rural and urban areas.

"If the cities boom, the areas outside the cities could have a huge boom," Blohm said. The same would be true if growth in the cities slowed to below the need to provide housing in rural areas.

SUPERVISOR DUSAN PETROVIC of King City said his only fear was that using an historical growth rate and an historical distribution of growth could have too great an impact on high-growth areas such as Carmel Valley.

"One percent growth in Carmel Valley would be quite a large number," he said. "One percent in Lockwood (at the south end of the county) wouldn't be one house."

The citizen task force has, as one of its charges, the job of deciding how much growth to allocate throughout the county.

This is where Moore's recommendation about utility capability enters the process. If insufficient sewage capacity or inadequate roads pose obstacles to development, the county could direct growth into areas without those problems rather than compounding existing land use difficulties.

According to planning department figures for eight regions of the county, the Carmel Valley-Monterey Peninsula area would get 36 percent of the county's growth outside the cities if past statistics are used. Of the 947 units suggested as a quota by the planning commission, the area would receive 338.

The Big Sur coast would receive 3 percent of the total, or 28 homes. The Upper Carmel Valley and Cachagua areas would get 11 homes or 1 percent of the total.

Other regions and growth shares include the Toro Park area with 65 homes or 7 percent of the total; North County, 308 homes or 32 percent; Salinas, 72 homes, 8 percent; the central Salinas Valley, 84 homes, 9 percent; and the South County, 41 homes, 4 percent.

ATTORNEY BRIAN FINEGAN of Salinas, whose clients include many of the major land developers in the county, was one of the few people at the supervisors' hearing to question the need for a growth quota at all.

"I'm wondering on what rational basis it has been determined the county needs to regulate the quantity of development?" he asked.

Finegan said that, in his opinion, "The quantity (of growth) has been rather small compared to the growth rate in other places motivated to go in a growth management direction."

He said the whole issue of putting a limit on the number of new homes and apartments was never discussed when the supervisors were considering the growth management statement they adopted last September. At that time, he said, the board discussions dealt with the quality of development to be approved.

Finegan believes requirements on the services which new development must make available—roads, water, sewers, schools—are the best criteria for regulating growth.

"A flat numerical goal is frankly meaningless," he told the supervisors.

Mike Woolton, general manager of the regional Associated General Contractors, said his group is only concerned that a growth goal be flexible enough to deal with changing market conditions in the fluctuating construction industry.

If there is a numerical limit on growth each year, he said, unused building permits from one year should be carried over to the next. In that way if high interest rates or other factors slow growth one year, builders might be able to rebound and take advantage of favorable conditions at a later date.

Growth management discussions began in Monterey County in June 1976.

Sam Farr has been pressing the supervisors to get on with the task since he joined the board three years ago.

Farr, who was relaxed and smiling after the Jan. 30 meeting, said, "We don't have to argue about it anymore. When you've got the majority, the minority comes along."

(Five of the eight members of the Task Force were appointed Tuesday.

State mulls changes in laws on underground water

PROPOSED CHANGES in state laws governing regulation of well drilling could force changes in the way water is drawn from the underground water supply in Carmel Valley.

The recommended changes in regulations governing wells are included in a 264-page report submitted two weeks ago by Gov. Jerry Brown's blue-ribbon commission on water rights.

According to William Gianelli, president of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board, among the proposals it suggests is a new law forbidding well users to take water from the ground faster than it is replenished.

This is a major issue in the farming regions of the San Joaquin Valley, where the underground water table has been "overdrafted" consistently.

According to Gianelli, the water management district is moving in the direction of regulating groundwater supplies. But he summed up the district's lack of legal authority to do so in one word: "Zilch."

What the district is trying to do, he said, is control the supply "at the consumer end." The board will review a draft report at its Feb. 13 meeting which recommends water allocations for cities and unincorporated areas on the Monterey Peninsula.

The district hopes to get the communities to accept a fixed share of the available water. They could plan for growth within that available supply, he said.

At the same meeting, the district board will review new data estimating the total water available to customers on the Monterey Peninsula.

Gianelli said there would either have to be a change in state law or another water shortage before the district could move into the area of controlling well drilling or pumping from existing wells.

John Logan, a hydrologist and a member of the Carmel Planning Commission, said he believes the major issue in use of the Carmel Valley aquifer is the political decision of how much water to maintain as a reserve against future droughts.

In order to do that, he said, the water district needs to know the effects of different rates of water pumping from the aquifer.

The district is now under contract with the U.S. Geological Survey to analyze the capacity of the aquifer. Once it has that data, the board can decide how much is needed as a drought reserve to protect vegetation in Carmel Valley.

Gianelli said the district would need new authority from the state to do more than make recommendations about drought reserve levels.

As for the specific concerns in the water rights report that an aquifer could be damaged if it is overpumped for too long, Gianelli said the problems here are different from those in the central valley.

"The basin here is different," he said. "At the end of the drought, a state survey said there were 20,000 acre-feet (of water) still available if Cal-Am (the California-American Water Co.) had the wells in the Lower Valley to get at it."

Cal-Am has applied for well permits to produce the additional water.

Gianelli said the fact that the entire aquifer was recharged within 60 days, after two years of drought, shows that the situation here is different from the agricultural valleys in Central California.

The aquifer is "more like a surface reservoir because it reacts so fast to surface flow," Gianelli added.

The people 'turned on' when the lights went out

WHEN THE LIGHTS went out Friday night the people turned on.

Carmel turned into a giant block party when the electricity was out for about two hours. An equipment malfunction at the Pacific Gas and Electric (PG&E) Moss Landing power plant darkened the city and the rest of the Central Coast area for nearly two hours.

Police and firemen were besieged with calls when the power failed at 9:58 p.m. Local bars were overrun with thirsty Crosby golf tournament customers.

At the Carmel Police Department, Nancy Clark, a parking officer, was working alone on her routine 4 p.m. to midnight shift.

When the electricity went out, the burglar alarm board at the station lit up "like a Christmas tree," she said. The power failure set off more than a dozen alarms at local shops.

Police received more than 100 calls in the two-hour period. Most people just wanted to know what had happened.

Sergeant Frank Corr, a Carmel policeman for 11 years, returned to the station from his night patrol to assist with the incoming calls.

Three officers for the midnight shift reported an hour early to help patrol the darkened streets. Carmel Police Chief William Ellis arrived to supervise activities during the emergency. Power was restored at 11:42 p.m.

NO BURGLARIES or serious crimes were reported during the two-hour period. But there were some comical calls:

- A woman phoned police to inform them she was locked inside her house, which was protected by an electronic eye system. The doors would not open while the electricity was off.
- An attendant at the Carmel Plaza underground parking garage noted that cars were backed up in the lot. The electric toll gate could not work.
- A senior citizen told police she was worried about a friend whose electric blanket had gone off.
- An evening jogger ran to the department to tell police his wife had just felt an earthquake.

City Administrator Jack Collins and his entire family arrived at the department about 11 p.m. to offer their assistance to police.

Both the police and fire departments had some lighting from emergency generators.

The fire department also received a flurry of calls.

BUSINESS BOOMED at local bars during the blackout. Some customers crowded into taverns partially lit by candles, such as the Hog's Breath Inn and the Forge in the Forest.

But the "hot spot" during the blackout was Maxwell McFly's Watering Hole on Ocean near San Carlos. The bar was pitch dark for more than an hour before the management finally brought out the candles. Flashlight-carrying waitresses did a brisk business serving drinks in the dark.

Carmel Mayor Gunnar Norberg was at the State Theater in Monterey seeing "Invasion of the Body Snatchers" when the lights went out.

Norberg said he and his wife, Wies, drove home after the blackout.

The blackout affected some 250,000 PG&E customers from Santa Cruz south to Soledad and east to Hollister. A generator exploded during a routine shifting procedure, according to Joe Cowen, the district manager. No injuries were reported.

Carmel residents will not be charged for the hours they received no electricity, Cowen said. "But they won't necessarily see any savings on their next bill," he added.

Shopping center developers will need EIR first

By KEN PETERSON

PLANS TO ADD 95,000 square feet of retail space to Carmel Center at the entrance to Carmel Valley will not be considered by the Monterey County Planning Commission until an environmental impact report is prepared.

The commission last week refused to discuss the design change without first seeing an EIR on the project, to be called Crossroads Shopping Center.

The new shopping area would double the size of Carmel Center, which includes such stores as Safeway, Longs Drug and an indoor mall, in addition to the Carmel Center Cinemas and Sambo's.

Commissioners said the new plan might attract tourist-oriented shops rather than stores supplying the shopping needs of residents. They also questioned the impact of the project on traffic and parking in an already congested area.

The 10-year-old development plan for the shopping center calls for a continuation of the indoor mall as well as construction of larger stores.

Carmel Valley Partners, the center developer, now wants to build a complex of small, shingle-roofed and redwood-sided shops on the northeast corner of the property, at Highway 1 and Rio Road.

This expansion of the center was outlined in the original general development plan a decade ago, the developers said.

JACK ANDERSON of Commercial Real Estate Service in San Francisco, a partner in the project, argued that the commission should require an EIR only when the developers bring in detailed plans for the shops they want to build.

He said the only change proposed now is in the basic configuration of the buildings.

But Commissioner William Peters of Carmel Valley said that change would have an environmental impact which the commission needs to assess before making recommendations on the new design.

"I would hope the EIR would look at the need for small shops versus the need for a large store as originally planned," he said. "You would have to convince us of the need for more small shops such as we already have. A large Macy's or whatever may be more in line with what people need."

Commissioner Peter Cailotto of Salinas said he believes mall shops would generate more traffic in the already congested area than would an enclosed mall built around a department store.

Peters said traffic and other environmental factors at the entrance to Carmel Valley have undergone "a radical change" since the development plan for Carmel Center was approved.

"Simply to assume we're going to approve in concept the same square footage is ludicrous," he told Anderson.

Rio Road may not be able to support the additional traffic the development would generate, he said. Despite the fact the total project meets the requirements for providing parking, Peters said he doesn't believe customers would walk from parking areas at the far west end of the shopping center to get to the shops proposed by Anderson and his partners.

The board of supervisors Tuesday approved the commission's recommendation that an EIR be prepared for the project.

A minor hazard?

Carmel Council to grope with a thorny problem

THE CARMEL CITY COUNCIL has a prickly problem on its hands.

The City Forestry Commission recommended at its regular monthly meeting Jan. 29 that cactus plants are a potential hazard and should be removed from all city property.

Last month, the council asked the commission to study the thorny issue. The request was made by Councilman Helen Arnold, who said the city could be liable for injuries on city-owned land that involve the spiny plants.

The commission's recommendation, if approved by the council, would mean that hundreds of cacti planted on city property would have to go. Many homeowners have planted such plants on city property in front of their homes.

One commission member thinks the cactus controversy has been blown out of proportion.

"It's not a big deal. The liability risk is not greater than the exposed tree roots on Carmel sidewalks," said Hugh Smith, a 12-year Carmel forestry commissioner. He called cacti in Carmel "a minor hazard."

Mrs. Arnold said she became concerned about the matter last month after she saw a young boy fall off his bicycle and narrowly miss landing on a cactus growing on city property.

Cacti are not native plants of Carmel. The plants, which have been added to many Carmel gardens, require little care and most can live for 15 years or more, Smith said.

"A cactus won't kill anybody, but it could sure take an eye out," Smith added.

Most cactus plants have shallow roots and can be easily transplanted. Gloves should be worn to removed them. Smith suggested that residents transplant cactus they have planted on city property to their own gardens.

The council is expected to consider the cactus issue in March.

Big auction Sunday to benefit BSI

"Saint Valentine's Finest Auction," to benefit the Behavioral Sciences Institute Foundation, will offer a wide variety of merchandise and prizes, Sunday, Feb. 11 in the Sierra Grand Ballroom of the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey.

The live auction, silent auction, and the prize drawing are all part of the fund-raising event to reach a goal of $100,000 for the purchase of equipment, and rehabilitation and educational services for residents of Monterey County.

A preview of the auction items and an antique valentine exhibit will be open to advanced ticket holders, volunteers and auction donors at 2 p.m. Wine and cheese will be served.

The auction officially opens at 3 p.m. with a silent auction, followed at 4:30 by the live auction. The Conte Four will provide music and a no-host bar will be open throughout the event.

A three-hour recording session, rides on the Goodyear blimp and a house concert by Ric Masten are among the many items that have been donated. Others include art and jewelry, special classes, and tickets to theatrical and sports events.

First prize in the drawing is a day-long trip to the Gold Country on Yosemite Airlines to pan for gold, ride the trains, and dine in a Western saloon.

Tickets are $5 (tax-deductible). For reservations or information, phone 625-1700 or 375-4181.

Slimmon to act on office building

Monterey County Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon will decide Thursday, Feb. 8, whether local developers can construct a scaled-down version of an office building in Carmel Valley at the corner of Rio Road and Carmel Rancho Boulevard.

Plans for the proposed building have been reduced from three to two stories after county officials ruled last year that the building would be too tall.

Slimmon said the two-story building, which will be adjacent to the new post office on Carmel Rancho Boulevard, is under the 35-foot height maximum for Lower Carmel Valley. Originally, the building was designed to be 45 feet tall.

The structure, with interior courtyard and underground parking, was designed by architect Paul Davis for Herma Smith Curtis and Henry Laskin.

The developers will ask for a variance from Slimmon to increase the lot coverage of the building by 10 percent to the 60 percent maximum. This is to make up for space lost in the rejected third story. The building will have 20,000 feet of leasable office space.

The Monterey County Planning Commission must approve the design for the proposed edifice.

It's in the cards

Valley woman reads the future

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

BILLIE ARNOLD of Carmel Valley has 78 different business cards without her name printed on them.

That's because they're a deck of playing cards. The game is the future.

Mrs. Arnold is a tarot reader. An amateur fortune-teller who uses a deck of cards to try to explain the past and prophesy the future.

Tarot cards are the traditional fortune-telling deck the Gypsies use. It is believed the cards originated in Egypt six centuries ago. Since then the pictorial symbols represented on them have evolved through time into a blend of pagan-Christian motifs.

Don't look for a royal flush when Mrs. Arnold puts her cards on the table. But for persons willing to spend $10 for a one-hour tarot reading, they might get a sneak preview of what lies ahead, she said.

"I usually manage to sort of laugh my way through the reading," explained the 30-year-old housewife and mother. "Sometimes people get mad. They say, 'That's my future you're laughing at.' "

Actually, Mrs. Arnold takes tarot cards seriously. She laughs only to ease the tension of nervous clients.

"People's lives don't hinge on my readings. But something I say might give them a hint about what to do concerning a certain problem they have," she explained.

TAROT IS NOT as strange as it first might seem. Each of the 78 cards depicts a scene or a person from which the tarot reader divines mystical interpretations.

Mrs. Arnold reads a person's fortune by placing 20 cards face down on a table in front of him. First, the client does the shuffling. Then Mrs. Arnold arranges the cards in meticulous order, in a kind of cross-like pattern.

The cards are slightly larger than those in a deck of regular playing cards. The artwork is fancier. Many of the same symbols are similar to both decks. Tarot cards are usually more expensive, ranging in price from $6 to $35 per pack.

The deck of tarot is divided into 22 "Major Arcana" cards, depicting such powerful figures as Death, the Devil, Justice, the Hanged Man, the Magician and the Fool.

Mrs. Arnold calls these 22 cards the "biggies," because they have the controlling influence on the other 56 cards. These other cards are called the "Minor Arcana." They are divided into four suits of 14 cards each. The suits are called Cups, Wands, Swords and Pentacles.

Mrs. Arnold keeps her tarot deck wrapped in soft, brown cloth.

"That way they don't pick up stray energies floating around in the air," she explained.

The cards don't lie ...

"and neither do I."

ONCE THE READING begins, Mrs. Arnold turns over the 20 cards dealt one by one, interpreting out loud what she sees as the meaning of each one.

For instance, if a "Page of Cups" turns up, the card—which resembles a jack of hearts—means that one's life will soon be filled with happiness. But if a "nine of Swords" turns up, this could mean trouble ahead.

According to Mrs. Arnold, the cards don't lie.

"And neither do I," she said. "You better watch out, because I'll tell you exactly what your cards say."

She said the cards can peek into the subconscious and tell people about such things as their love life, their financial status and any travel plans that lie ahead.

MRS. ARNOLD, a native of Jackson, Tenn., told one friend recently that she was about to go on a trip with a blond man born under the Aquarian astrological sign.

The friend laughed. She said she knew no such man.

But six days later, she was off on a vacation with a man fitting the general description.

One man's card reading showed "unfaithfulness" in his life. A few days later, Mrs. Arnold said, he told her he found out

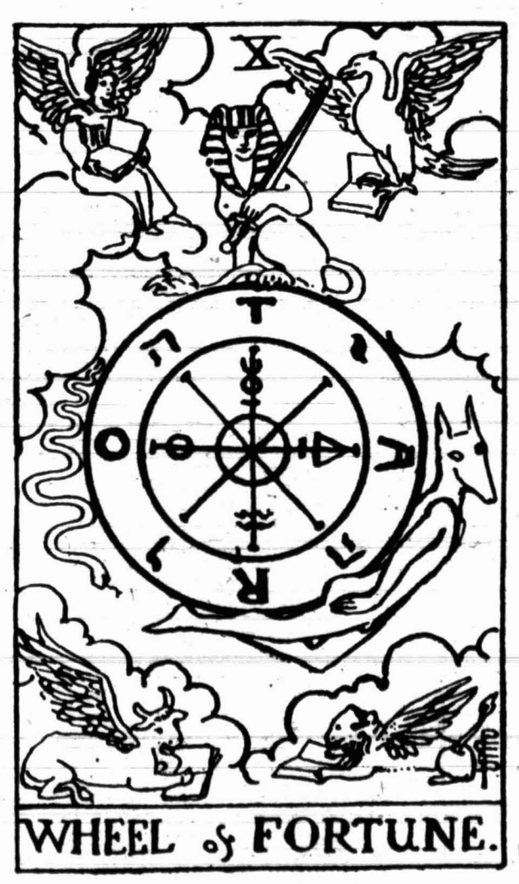
HERE ARE four cards out of a tarot deck of 78. If these cards were dealt in a traditional tarot reading, this is what they could mean. The interpretations printed here were taken from "The Pictorial Key to the Tarot" by Arthur Edward Waite.

THE MAGICIAN: A youthful figure in the robe of a magician with a smile of confidence and shining eyes. Above his head is the mysterious sign of the Holy Spirit, the sign of life, like an endless cord, forming the figure eight in a horizontal position. About his waist is a serpent devouring his own tail. This is a conventional symbol of eternity, but here it indicates the eternity of attainment in the spirit. On the table in front of him are the symbols of the four tarot suits, signifying the elements of natural life. This card symbolizes the divine motive in man.

PAGE OF CUPS: A fair, pleasing, somewhat effeminate page, of studious and intent demeanor, contemplates a fish rising from a cup to look at him. Divinitory meanings: Fair young man impelled to render service; also, news, message, application, reflection, meditation.



WHEEL OF FORTUNE: The occult explanations of this card are associated with the rise and fall of fortune, itself. The card also means principle, fecundity, virile honour, and ruling authority. The symbolic picture stands for the perpetual motion of a fluidic universe and for the flux of human life.

NINE OF SWORDS: It shows a woman seated on her couch in lamentation with swords over her. She is depicted as one who knows no sorrow like her own. Divinitory meanings: Death, failure, miscarriage, delay, deception, disappointment, despair.

Sunset Theatre screens 'King and I'

The acclaimed motion picture version of The King and I by Rodgers and Hammerstein will be screened Tuesday, Feb. 13 at 8 p.m. as the monthly presentation of the Musical Theatre Film Festival at Sunset Theater, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

Based on the book Anna and the King of Siam, the movie explores the experiences of a willful British governess who comes to Siam to tutor the King's many wives and children.

The movie stars Deborah Kerr and Yul Brynner. The original Broadway production starred Brynner and Gertrude Lawrence.

Favorite songs from the show include Getting to Know You, I Whistle a Happy Tune, March of the Siamese Children, I Have Dreamed and Shall We Dance.

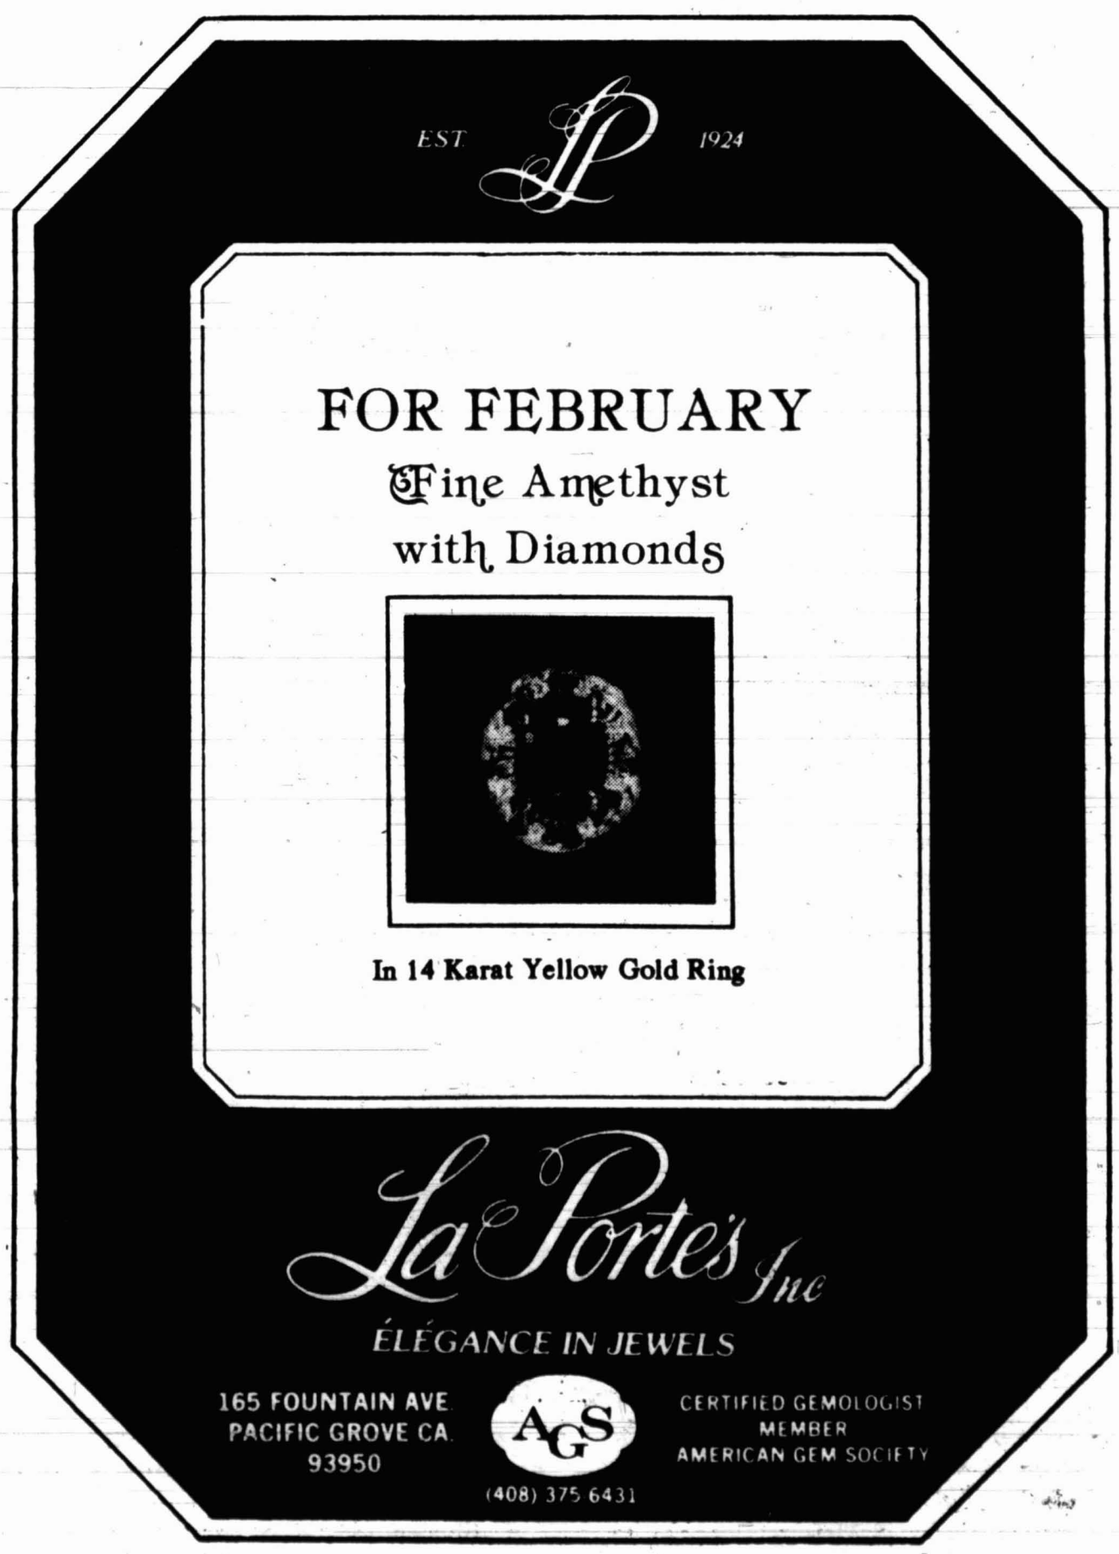
Admission to the program is $2.

For further information, phone 624-3996.



Sunset Views:

Three films this week

THE MUSICAL THEATER FILM FESTIVAL will present The King and I Tuesday, Feb. 13 at 8 p.m. in the Sunset Theatre. Taken from the book, Anna and the King of Siam, which was made into a movie starring Irene Dunne and Rex Harrison, this musical was first seen on Broadway starring Gertrude Lawrence and a little-known actor, Yul Brynner.

He went on to win the Oscar in the filmed version of the play and his magnetic performance as the virile and demanding 19th century King of Siam has indelibly linked him with the role. His King pulsates with vitality even during his rare moments of doubt and is perfectly balanced by Deborah Kerr's crisply British governess. Their Shall We Dance? number is one of the screen's most joyous musical celebrations, and the Rodgers and Hammerstein score is particularly memorable.

TWO SELECTED FILMS of arts and science will be shown Thursday, Feb. 15 at 1 p.m., in the Leonard Carpenter Hall as part of the Brown Bag Cinema Series.

The film, Solar Energy, shows this being used as a source of limited home and industrial heating, and technologists are working on the first space solar power station. The United States is allocating $300 million a year on solar energy development and other countries are also expending substantial funds in the desperate race to find an alternative energy source. But first solar energy must be made economically viable and we must answer the questions: Who owns the sun, and who should collect and distribute its power? When the oil supply ends, can solar energy meet our needs?

The sun is capable of supplying 100,000 times the total global energy requirement and sunlight is free. But the cost of collecting and storing it is sky high. Current solar energy experiments are of crucial importance. Can the sun be efficiently harnessed to power the planet?

Ballet With Edward Villella is a film in which members of the world-acclaimed New York City Ballet Company perform for the first time exclusively for an educational film. With soloists Edward Villella and Patricia McBrid as well as the corps de ballet in spectacular excerpts from George Balanchine's Apollo and Jewels and the classic Giselle, this film is more than mere performance.

Dancer Edward Villella takes us to practice sessions to show us the arduous discipline (as demanding as any sport) of his art. His fresh, knowledgeable approach injects a new vitality into the subject of ballet as he communicates the joy and excitement of beautiful movement and explains the paradox of ballet—the achievement of total freedom through total control.

Preceding these films you are invited to bring your brown bag lunch. Sunset Center provides the coffee.

SOME MORE THOUGHTS on theater ... The most astonishing thing about theater in California these days is that there is so much of it. Not only in Los Angeles, San Francisco and San Diego, but in much smaller towns as well, from Santa Barbara to Los Gatos. More surprising still, the audience for theater seems to be definitely on the increase, and this in an era when it should have been stone-cold dead. Thoughtful folks go to the movies now, and the kids are into television and rock. At least that is the theory.

Despite the fact that about 90 percent of what goes on in all of our playhouses, professional as well as amateur, is not very good there is some truly excellent work being done at all levels. In the San Francisco area alone, for instance, in addition to William Ball's well-established American Conservatory Theater and the full-scale professional productions imported seasonally from Broadway, there are many very active local groups, several of which maintain consistently high standards.

Among the latter are the Julian Theater, which fearlessly tackles new plays as well as old ones and is not afraid to experiment; and the Berkeley Repertory Theater, which puts on eclectic seasons ranging this past year from Goldoni to Shaw to an original script commissioned from an unknown playwright.

Courage, especially in the form of rushing in where professional angels fear to tread, is a highly commendable characteristic of small theater in California. This is partly because the West Coast has always been an adventurous section of the country. More importantly, in San Francisco and Los Angeles, Actors' Equity, the stage actors' union, has been extraordinarily tolerant about allowing groups that operate in houses seating 99 or less to produce plays and charge admission without paying salaries or even minimal expenses.

New York productions that would cost thousands of dollars can be put on here for almost nothing. The reason for this is that there is an enormous pool of acting talent, especially in Los Angeles, attracted inevitably by the lure television and movie gold.

Some need a place to showcase themselves, and all need to work in a medium that attempts to use the best in them. In New York, the impulse to mount a play usually comes from a producer or director with a particular point of view or a specific project in mind. Theater in California, especially in Los Angeles, is rooted in the needs and desires of the performers themselves.

Mr. John Bikas
The Village Corner
Carmel, California 93921

Dear Mr. Bikas:

My husband, Rollo Payne, started the Village Corner after World War II. He was an officer in the U.S. Navy and ran the Ship's Store at the Del Monte Hotel in Monterey -- now the Naval Post Graduate School.

He had a self-service soda fountain type operation during the war years and it was so popular with the Navy personnel that he decided to stay in Carmel after the war and started "The Corner."

You probably know that Rollo died from cancer in October of this past year.

The reason I am writing is that I was in Carmel over the holidays visiting some of my family and had lunch in "our" Village Corner. I was so very pleased to see that you have kept the old spirit there and are operating it so beautifully.

I was prompted to write this letter because I was so happy to see the Corner in such good shape and also because I take the Pine Cone and read the very nice article about you in the December 14 issue. It sounds to me as though you have the same spirit my Rollo had.

Best wishes for the future of the Village Corner.

Most sincerely yours,

Mrs. Rollo H. Payne

P.S. The Pine Cone article mentions some celebrities who have eaten at the Corner. You will be interested to know that when Liz Taylor was married to her first husband, Nicky Hilton, they honeymooned at Del Monte Lodge but had lunch almost every day at the Village Corner. My husband had a candy store next door to the Corner too and sold magazines there. Liz's picture was on the cover of almost every movie magazine at that time, and they would buy them all and peruse them as they had lunch ... and now she's a Senator's wife.

The wine connoisseur

Is the South a wine desert?

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

ONE MONTH AGO, in this column, we published a reader's letter upbraiding us for citing this area of the country, sometimes called the "Great Southern Bible Belt," as a virtual wine desert. She cited the "most complete wine cellar" of her experience as being in Dyersburg, Tenn.

We could only applaud the independence of her Wine & Food Society host, and reiterate the statistics of the U.S. Department of Agriculture which reveal Tennessee is the third lowest on the totem pole of wine consumption, only tenths of a gallon per capita per annum above Iowa and Kentucky, at .933 of a gallon. That's a mighty great liquid distance from the French and Italian consumption figures of about 30 gallons per adult per year.

But there is an interesting dichotomy here. While there are a great many non-consumers of wine because it is against their beliefs, there is a very vocal and vigorous band of wine lovers, conversant not only with the best of European vintages but of sufficient numbers and purchasing power to make this an attractive market for even some of the emerging boutique wineries of California, in addition to all of the nationally known and distributed favorites such as Almaden, Paul Masson, Gallo, and Christian Brothers.

"The market is ripe," he told me. "Most people here used to be hung up on French labels, but in blind tastings we conduct in our classes, California wines really score high. The students are amazed."

AT A DINNER in Pete Sciara's new Palazzino Restaurant, our spectacular "toasted ravioli" were served with Kenwood 1977 Sonoma Dry Chenin Blanc, the linguine with clam sauce coming on with Firestone 1976 Santa Ynez Valley Chardonnay. Our strawberry cheesecake came on with the demi-sec Schramsberg Cremant.

The veal piccata offered Banfi's 1970 Brunello di Montalcino, a superbly fragrant cousin to Chianti; the scaloppine di vitello with a decanted 1955 Chateau Latour, a great wine in its prime, with tasting signs, in soft acidity, that the long, slow decline may not be too many years away.

A three-day visit to another riverport city, Savannah, Ga., showed its dramatic growth to rival Memphis. Georgia, established in 1733, during the reign of George II, by Parliamentarian James Oglethorpe as a buffer for Carolina against Spanish Florida, is now becoming an investment hedge against inflation by the counselor scouts of the likes of Joe Namath. The city's 1,100 historical restoration sites are outdoing Williamsburg.

ONE OF THE OLDEST houses in America, built in 1754, originally a seaman's tavern where Stevenson's Cap'n Flint of Treasure Island fame may have breathed his last, is now part of a maze of dining rooms of the Pirate's House restaurant. Below the peg-beamed rooms are secret passageways, once tunnels to the river wharves down which rum-soaked sailors were shanghaied to sea. Now this is Herb Traub and his son Kit's wine cellar for superb vintages of both European and California wines.

Atlanta is, of course, a booming and sophisticated metropolis, with some exciting award-winning restaurants, but the gentle beauty of Savannah is an undeniable lure for today's wealthy and world-weary seeking peaceful asylum. There are churches fronting almost every one of the old squares of the founding fathers, with statistics proving this to be still a part of the Great Southern Bible Belt, but we're happy to "drink our words" as we find the same dichotomy among the happy wining and dining segment of the Georgia population.

That "the South will rise again" is certainly true. While the wine vines that were a part of Oglethorpe's Trustees' Garden, along with mulberry trees for silk, did not make it, and cotton did, when the Savannahians rise today, they're quite apt to have a wine glass in their hands to toast tomorrow.

Submit 'Dideann' works now; deadline is Feb. 15

The editors are now accepting works of fiction, nonfiction, poetry, criticism and reviews. The next issue is scheduled for publication on March 22, according to editor John Dotson.

Work from local writers is preferred but all materials submitted will be considered, Dotson said.

Manuscripts should be sent to P.O. Box 159, Carmel, with a self-addressed, stamped return envelope.

The magazine staff wants to find a circulation manager willing to volunteer his services for two hours a day during quarterly publication deadlines. Duties would include contacting bookstores and supervising subscription-mailing.

The non-profit magazine also is seeking donations. The last issue, published in December, was underwritten by a $400 grant from the Carmel Cultural Commission and by a local printer. All donations are tax deductible.

The first issue is available at local bookstores, including Books Inc. in Carmel Plaza; the Thunderbird Bookshop in Carmel Valley and Bookworks in Pacific Grove.

Dideann, priced at $2.50 in bookstores, costs $3.50 by mail. For more information, phone 624-5744.

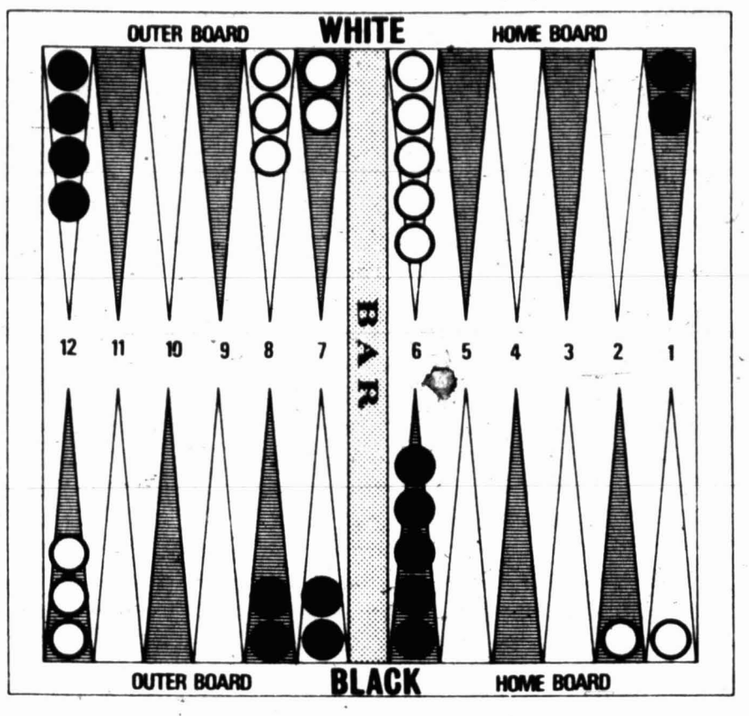
Backgammon

By OMAR SHARIF



Black rolls 5-1. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

If you think you recognize this position, you are almost right. The only difference between this problem and the one presented last week is that here White has already split his runners.

Again the 5 is automatic—Black brings down a man from his mid-point to his 8-point. Here, too, there are only two possible moves for the 1: a) splitting the runners, bringing one to the White 2-point; b) slotting on the Black 5-point.

Last week, we saw that slotting on the 5-point showed an almost 2-to-1 advantage in gain over risk. Do the odds change when the runners are split?

Now White will be able to hit the Black blot on the 5-point with 25 combinations: all 3's; all 4's; 2-1; 3-1; 2-2. (Again, 1-1 can be better used to make the White 5-point.) Now it is almost an even money proposition, since Black has only 26 useful numbers that cover. Now the time lost by having the blot hit becomes a crucial factor, and I would not risk slotting.

With the White runners split, I prefer splitting the Black runners. That gives me play in the White home board, and the possibility of escaping with one of the runners is increased.

TIP: When your opponent has split his runners, don't slot in your home board if you can find any reasonable alternative.

The Music Corner:

Mozart lives! Festival a delight

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

MOZART LIVES. Pass it on. Of course at Hidden Valley that is not news. And it starts at the top. Hidden Valley director Peter Meckel has professed a never-ending love affair with Mozart for a long time. And no one was more delighted with the Hidden Valley Mozart Mini-Festival last Sunday at Sunset Theatre.

But the delight was shared by an enchanted audience, pianists Boris Bloch and Douglas Montgomery, and the opera orchestra itself. Despite the exceptionally long program, the performances wore extremely well, to the on-going credit of the Austrian composer now dead 188 years.

The concert was divided into two sections with an hour between in which a wind quintet performed at a punch and cookie intermission. In the first part were heard the Idomeneo Overture, the Piano Concerto No. 20 in d minor and the Symphony No. 41 in C. Part II offered the Symphony No. 1 in E flat, the Piano Concerto No. 21 in C, and the Concerto for Two Pianos in E flat.

JOEL ETHAN FRIED directed the chamber-sized orchestra in clear and musical performances. The orchestra suffered some ragged playing in the violins occasionally, and was overwhelmed at times by Bloch's big piano playing.

After a tight and resonant reading of the Idomeneo Overture, the ensemble was joined by Bloch for the Concerto in d minor, K. 466, one of only two such Mozart works in a minor key. As we have witnessed twice before on the Peninsula, Bloch's irrepressible personality transcended the music. While deferring to the music itself, he still imprints it with his own distinctive impulse.

There is an unpredictability to his playing that fascinates. His performance here revealed fresh phrasing, restless tension, and a barely contained expansiveness. But contained it was to the dimensions of the music, if not to the dimensions of the orchestra, which he made seem smaller than it was.

At the point of the two cadenzas, composed by Beethoven, Bloch did expand. For those few brief moments Mozart suddenly became the Beethoven of the Emperor Concerto.

Mozart's Symphony No. 41 in C, K. 551 "Jupiter" concluded Part I. Conductor Fried chose brisk tempi for the two outside movements. This did strain the violins a bit in the first movement but the tempo was ideal to the music and the small orchestra. (This movement is usually played slower but a faster tempo makes sense because this symphony starts fairly light and only gets deeper in musical content with the suceeding movements.)

In a manner similar to Haydn's, Mozart's lyrical slow movement contains a center of tragic grandeur. Fried and the orchestra rose to this occasion with style and intensity. They likewise captured the magic of the crossing scales in the minuet, and brought vigor to the fugal finale.

PIANIST DOUGLAS MONTGOMERY cut a handsome figure on stage and was a beautiful musician in the Concerto No. 21 in C, K. 467. He achieved a subtle and sweet tone and played with fine style. He blended better with the orchestra than did his flamboyant colleague, Bloch. But he too exhibited flair, treating the fast running passages with shimmering clarity, and the more expressive moments with thoughtful phrase and tender feeling.

He cast special sensitivity on the famous andante. He played his own cadenzas in the two outer movements. They were finely wrought pieces and in the latter he even repeated the main theme of the opening movement.

Hearing the two pianists together in the Concerto in E flat, K. 365 was especially interesting after hearing them separately. This work is a bit cumbersome, as Mozart goes, and the focus is therefore much more trained on the two keyboards. That the piece was well played and that Bloch and Montgomery accomplished dialog and tutti with success are common knowledge.

But while each artist held his own, Bloch came forth with the stronger statement. His dynamic contrasts were more dramatic, his phrasing more surprising, his individuality more obvious. And this is to take nothing from Montgomery, who is an artist I could hear again and again with great pleasure. Rather, it is that Bloch has the audacity and the talent reserve that all but guarantee a big league career. And, all things being equal, he deserves it.

PRIOR TO MONTGOMERY'S first appearance, the orchestra played Mozart's child-made Symphony No. 1 in E flat, K. 16. Charming? Of course. And well played too. But as simple and even repetitive in places as it is, it is still Mozart, obviously.

The wind quintet concert during refreshments was no small event, though it needed to be heard through a lot of conversation. The big work was the quintet by Nielsen. Then came Passacaglia by Barthe, Sea Chanties (only one I think) cleverly arranged by Malcolm Arnold, and a Scott Joplin rag.

The music was deliciously played and was obviously a source of joy to its musicians, Jacqueline Rosen, Donna Forster, Joan Dowlin, Michael Arnold and Mitchell Byler.

THIS SUNDAY, the 11 a.m. service at All Saints' in Carmel will include Mozart's Coronation Mass with Charles Hirt conducting a hand-picked choir of all-California high school students, as produced by Hidden Valley.

Fund-raising drive launched for museum

The Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art has launched a three-year fund-raising drive for a planned $500,000 expansion program of the facility's art collection, classes and building.

The museum membership must raise $380,000 by 1981 in order to meet the requirements of a $120,000 grant it has received from the National Endowment for the Arts, it was announced Monday, Jan. 29, at the annual membership dinner.

Top funding priority will be for installation of an elevator to serve the handicapped and also to lift large exhibition materials, said Mrs. George Dietterle, president of the museum association.

"We have made tentative studies to construct the elevator and expand the second story collection area by building a wing out over the driveway," Mrs. Dietterle said.

Additional storage space for the museum's growing permanent collection and more office space for its staff are also primary needs.

The association plans to raise the money through seeking foundation grants, individual donations and special benefits. "Already several of our patrons have been quite generous. We are optimistic," Mrs. Dietterle said.

She said the museum staff also hopes to improve its museum on wheels program that takes artworks to outlying communities and schools.

The art museum, at 559 Pacific St., is celebrating its 20th anniversary. Founded in 1959 in Carmel by a group of 13 artists, the association moved to its present Monterey location in 1969.

Mushroom art in Pacific Grove

Mushroom paintings by Mary Barnas Pomeroy of Carmel Valley will be on view through February at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History, Forest and Central avenues, Pacific Grove.

Mrs. Pomeroy has considerable experience as a scientific illustrator; her drawings appear in Herbert L. Mason's A Flora of the Marshes of California, Woodbridge Metcalf's Native Trees of the San Francisco Bay Region and numerous scientific publications. She received her formal art training from her father, the German-Ecuadorian landscape painter, Carl F. J. Barnas, and from the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia.

The artist has exhibited across the United States including the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences, the Hunt Botanical library and the California Academy of Sciences.

The exhibition may be viewed daily except Monday from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Admission is free.

PINE CONE 14 YEARS OLD TODAY

FOURTEEN YEARS have passed. For the 728th time the Pine Cone greets you and wishes you every good thing. Some of you have perused all the issues and survived. Despite the passage of the years and changes in editors our message is always the same.

William Overstreet, the paper's first editor, wrote in that issue: "We have come to stay as long as the general public and the business interests of Carmel prosper us or suffer us to remain. To permit this journal to struggle and languish and die—would be a far greater black-eye and loss to the community than the publisher.

"The foundation for the establishment of this weekly paper is a profound confidence in the future and that not distant prosperity of our beloved Carmel-by-the-Sea."

SAN SIMEON HIGHWAY TO BYPASS VILLAGE

With Carmel's wishes more than halfway met, engineers of the state Highway Commission have decided upon the alignment of the Carmel-San Simeon Highway and will keep it away from the town by the width of Hatton Fields.

The route would leave the Monterey-Carmel Highway at the junction with the old valley road at La Loma Terrace. From the river it will take a straight route to Point Lobos, there joining the Highlands Road and will cut many of the bad curves down the coast.

JEFFERS "AT HOME"

Jackie Barett got what he wanted.

The fifteen-year-old guest of Mrs. John Ball started for the Robinson Jeffers' house on the Point to secure for a friend Jeffers' autograph in a book he carried with him. Jackie wandered cross-country and approached the stone house from the rear—near Jeffers' woodpile.

Jackie was "startled out of his skin" when a man cleared the stone wall from the inner side and grabbed him by the nape of his neck.

"You will not steal my wood," he bellowed.

Jack regained his composure after a moment and managed to explain that he had come on a perfectly honest errand.

Jeffers laughed heartily over the mistake and invited Jackie into his home. Once inside, Jeffers entertained Jackie and gave him the sought-after autograph. When the boy left this time he exited through the front door where he enjoyed the best laugh. When he looked back he saw on the door knob the sign, "Not At Home."

CASANOVA STREET OPENING ON COUNCIL AGENDA

COUNCIL MEMBERS will hear objections from property owners to the proposed opening of Casanova Street and Fourth at the City Council meeting this Wednesday.

One property owner, Sinclair McClellan, has presented the council with a check for the entire property owners' share in a cooperative project. Other property owners object to losing the quiet of a dead-end street.

CONGRESSMAN GUILTY OF PAYROLL FIXING

Ernest K. Bramblett, Republican congressman from this district, was found guilty by a federal jury Tuesday of falsifying his congressional office payroll.

During the trial, Judge Bastian threw out eleven of the eighteen charges against Bramblett. The seven remaining were for each of the seven months when Mrs. Margaret M. Swanson's name appeared in the government payroll as clerical help in Bramblett's office. She testified that she had done no work during that period and her husband said that he had "kicked back" the pay to the congressman.

Bramblett is free on $2,500 bail.

MIDDLE SCHOOL LOSES 5TH GRADE

IN A SPIRITED debate over retaining the fifth grades in elementary schools where there are vacant classrooms while classrooms are overcrowded at Middle School, the Carmel school board voted to place the students back into the lower schools.

Board members Rev. James Brock who is running for re-election and Richard Wilsdon voted against the proposal because they felt the children would be deprived of the better art, music, language and other programs only available at Middle School.

Preview reception Friday

Nathan Shevitz opens one-man show

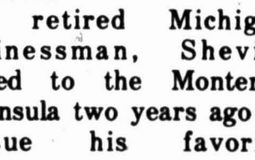
The first one-man show of abstractionist paintings by Nathan Shevitz will open with a preview reception Friday, Feb. 9 in the Main Gallery of the Pacific Grove Art Center, 568 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove, from 7 to 9 p.m. Refreshments and hors d'oeuvres will be served; everyone is welcome.

A retired Michigan businessman, Shevitz moved to the Monterey Peninsula two years ago to pursue his favorite avocation—art. Since he began to paint 15 years ago, he has exhibited at the Pontiac Creative Arts Center in Pontiac, Mich. Shevitz describes his paintings as "feeling feels," because of the emotional impact the textured geometric designs have on the viewer.

In addition to Shevitz's paintings, a continuing exhibit of the Photography of Edna Bullock may be viewed in the Fern Room; sculpture of Skip Kadish and Derrel Whitmeyer is also on display.

The exhibits will remain on view Tuesday through Saturday from 1-5 p.m. or by appointment until March 3.

For more information or appointments, phone 375-2208.



Free lecture on 'Search for Life'

Search for Life is the thriller of a free lecture to be given by James M. McGrew, Monday, Feb. 12, at noon in Sunset Theatre, Carmel. McGrew is a practitioner and teacher of Christian Science and a member of the Board of Lectureship of The First Church of Christ, Scientist of Boston, Mass.

McGrew was an officer in the U.S. Army and Air Force during World War II and conducted Christian Science services in the South Pacific. After the war, he continued to carry on his healing work in Christian Science.

In his lecture, McGrew will discuss the spiritual power of Christian precepts in coping with the physical and mental troubles of everyday living and will cite cases of healing and regeneration.

Everyone is invited to hear McGrew; child care will be provided. For further information, phone 624-8241.

Donations asked

Members of the Monterey Bay Wellesley Club have begun their annual task of marking, sorting and pricing books for the 15th annual Bargains in Books sale, Saturday and Sunday, March 31-April 1 at the Armed Services YMCA in Monterey.

The popular sale has offered books in 32 categories, including rare, out-of-print and collector's volumes in the past. Donations of all kinds of books are needed; all donations are tax-deductible.

Three Monterey Peninsula girls are attending Wellesley this year. They are Robin Morris and Libby Plank of Carmel and Marisel Brown of Salinas. Another Carmelite, Terry Thomas, who is now in Europe on a Youth for Understanding grant, will enter the college as a freshman in September, 1979.

Proceeds from the Bargains in Books sale are used for the club's Barbara Bell Thompson Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Dick Crispo surrealist paintings featured in one-man show

Portraits and Environmental Moods, the 56th one-man show of surrealist painter Dick Crispo will open Friday, Feb. 9, with a preview reception at the Carmel Art Association Galleries, located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to the reception from 6-8 p.m.; refreshments will be served.

Crispo, an internationally known artist and teacher, was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., in 1945. The recipient of 23 awards, he won first place in the California State Fair in 1964, and was honored by the president of the Mexican government in 1974.

His paintings hang in 34 permanent public collections throughout the world including the Museum of Western Art in Tokyo, Museum of Modern Art in Mexico City, Bibliotheque Nationale in Paris, and the UNESCO Library in New York City.

Though he primarily paints murals, Crispo also does graphics, watercolors and acrylics. He describes his art as "primarily dealing with social commentary or personal observation."

Crispo, who is active in community affairs, was chiefly responsible for the establishment of Monterey Peninsula's Museum on Wheels and has taught folk and ethnic arts at Monterey Peninsula College.

Portraits and Environmental Moods will be on display at the Carmel Art Association Galleries from 11 a.m.-5 p.m. daily through March 7.

For more information, phone 624-6176.

Fashion show for Hadassah

An evening of fun and fashion with designer Stanley Sherman, co-sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Chapter of Hadassah and Saks Fifth Avenue, is planned for Thursday evening, Feb. 8 from 6:30 p.m. at Saks, 1 Del Monte Center, Monterey. The well-known designer will personally narrate a presentation of his latest designs.

Wine and hors d'oeuvres will be served. Door prizes and a drawing will add a touch of excitement.

A donation of $5 per person is asked. All proceeds of the fashion show will be donated to the world-famous Hadassah Medical Organization in Jerusalem.

Advance reservations are not necessary, but further details are available from chairman Joyce Kurtz, 659-3635 or Judy Joseph, 624-5359.

'Facing the Music' debuts at First

Facing the Music, a 19th century Victorian comedy, will be staged by the Troupers of the Gold Coast, Friday and Saturday, Feb. 9-10 at California's First Theatre, Scott and Pacific streets, Monterey. Curtains are at 8:30 p.m.

First performed in the 1800s, Facing the Music is about the confusion that ensues when two couples, both named Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, live in the same building. A comedy of errors begins when one Mrs. Smith comes home from a long vacation to what she believes is her husband's new apartment. When he discovers the wrong wife in his apartment, John Smith attempts to hide her from his real wife who is also returning home from a trip.

Directed by Laverne Seeman, the production stars Jennie Sellard and Judy Marabee Boone as the Mrs. John Smiths; and Joe Garibay and Russell Lynch as the two Mr. Smiths. The supporting cast includes Tracy Rich, Alex Olow, Chris Kirk, Madeleine Hicks and Amy Garibay.

The play will be followed by the traditional olio, an aftershow of songs and skits performed by the Troupers.

Weekend Toro hike planned

The third annual Valentine's Day hike through the oak knolls of Toro Regional Park near Salinas and a loop trip through the Forest of Nisene Marks are on the outing calendar of the local Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club this weekend. All interested hikers are welcome.

The Valentine's Day hike Saturday, Feb. 10 is a moderate eight-mile excursion through the trails of Toro Park with a 1,200-foot elevation gain. Hikers will meet at the Cinema 70 parking lot, Del Monte Shopping Center at 8:30 a.m. or the far parking lot in Toro Park at 9 p.m. Bring lunch, water and wear hiking boots.

For more information, phone Larry Lapidus, 1-422-5529.

A six-mile loop hike through the Loma Prieta Lumber Co. railroad grade trail and a walk to China Camp in the Forest of Nisene Marks is planned Sunday, Feb. 11. Hikers will meet behind World Savings and Loan, Del Monte Shopping Center, Monterey at 8:30 a.m. to form carpools or at the park entrance across the railroad tracks in Aptos at 9:30 a.m. Suggested carpool contribution is $2; bring lunch, water and wear boots.

For more information, phone Merrill Jones, 624-3052, evenings.

Theatre reviews

Plot of 'Laura' is slim but interesting

By BARBARA MOUNTREY

THE SUBTITLE of Laura, by Vera Caspary and George Sklar, is A Mystery. That rather overstates the case, for the plot of this slim little whodunit is rather transparent. However, there is enough action to generate a mild feeling of suspense, and in the current production at the Studio Theatre, the characters are well enough developed to maintain audience interest in their fate.

The plot involves a woman who was supposedly murdered but wasn't, a detective who falls in love with her portrait and eventually with her more corporeal aspect, her Southern gentleman fiance, an elderly aesthete and assorted minor characters.

The cast is uniformly good, from Rosemary Garrison's complex and very human Laura to Roy Pait's brief but amusing moments as Olsen. Jim Jensen gives a polished performance as Waldo Lydecker, lover of beauty, delivering his epigrams with a fine relish. John Derek Atkinson plays Mark MacPherson, the detective, with quiet intelligence. Harrison Shields strides about manfully as the last bastion of Southern chivalry.

Steve Moorer is excellent as Danny Morgan, the young boy who has also fallen under Laura's spell, and Jane Strauch is powerful as the nasty, martyred mother of the boy. Carol Moorer is fine as Bessie, Laura's maid and surrogate mother, although the religious aspects of the character grow a little overdone.

The well-paced direction, foundation of the show's success, is by Diane Hall, assisted by Jonathan Grimes Richards. The rather monotone set, not very suggestive of the apartment of a well-paid copywriter, is by Keith Decker and Connie Curtis. Prominently featured is the portrait of Laura, by Jesse Corsaut. It's a good likeness, but misses the warmth and charm projected by Miss Garrison, the qualities that make men of all ages fall in love with Laura. Lighting, by Charlie Houghton, is adequate, except for a spot near center stage where the players turn blue.

Laura is precisely the sort of play that has kept the Studio Theatre/Restaurant popular for 20 years. It's good to see that the quality of the productions—and the food!—is being maintained under the new ownership.

'School for Wives' is timely even today

By BARBARA MOUNTREY

PART OF THE DEFINITION of a classic is that its appeal endures beyond its own time. In this respect, as in others, Moliere's "School for Wives" is a classic, for it is as timely today as it was 300 years ago.

The plot involves Arnolphe, or Monsier de la Souche, a wealthy gentleman who has determined to avoid being cuckolded, as so many of his friends have been. He has therefore adopted a young girl and had her raised in a convent, innocent of the ways of society, so that she will know only what he wishes her to know and will obey him in all things when he makes her his bride.

He has, however, confused ignorance with stupidity; his lovely ward, Agnes, triumphs in the end through her feminine intelligence and the strength of young love.

In the Staff Players' production, now being presented at the Forest Theater-in-the-Ground, Alan Coppens gives an outstanding performance as Arnolphe. He is intensely alive, sympathetic despite his monomania. He is wrong, and sometimes ridiculous, but never a true villain.

Coppens manages to make the heroic couplets flow like natural speech, a feat that gives the rest of the cast varying degrees of trouble. The verse imposes a real discipline on the actors: it's hard to fake a line when it has to be in iambic pentameter and rhyme with the preceding line! As a result, gaps in dialog are more glaringly obvious than in the usual play. Fortunately, such gaps were few.

Leslie Robinson is a perfect Agnes, pink and white as a Dresden figurine, sweet without ever seeming insipid. We see her develop in the course of the play from an innocent schoolgirl to a charming young woman who has reasoned for herself what is right and how to go about achieving it.

Throughout the play there are a good many epigrams on the nature of men, women and marriage, most of them occurring in the discussions between Arnolphe and his old friend Chrysalde, played by Eben Swift. Chrysalde is the voice of reason; he accepts the ways of society, and has clearly come to terms with them in his own way. If his wife is entertaining a lover in his absence, he is no doubt engaged in a spot of dalliance himself. Although still occasionally groping for lines, Swift conveys an amused, very French tolerance for the foibles of human nature.

Adam Miller is Horace, the dashing young admirer of Agnes who unwittingly plays right into Arnolphe's hands. He has just the right touch of eager youth. The scenes in which he extols the charms of his love while Arnolphe gnashes his teeth and mutters darkly are beautifully funny, so much so that some lines are lost in audience laughter.

THIS BALANCING of light and dark, of openness and subterfuge, shows the fine directorial hand of Marcia Hovick. Also to her credit is the use of all available space in the little theater.

Hungry friar in residence

HE'S THE "tuck" of the town.

His name is Friar Tuck. He's a five-foot four-inch, fiber glas dummy at the Friar Tuck coffee shop at Fifth and Dolores. The restaurant was formerly called Donel's.

The friendly friar has already caused more trouble than he's worth. All 45 pounds of him.

Just ask restaurant owner Gregory Cellitti of Carmel.

His brother, David, of Long Beach, spent months casting the friar, which cost $2,000 to make. David molds wax figures for the Movie World Wax Museum in Buena Park.

The biggest problem was getting the friar here.

Pacific Southwest Airlines (PSA) agreed to let Cellitti transport the figure for half fare, $16. But there was one catch. He had to be accompanied by an adult. So Cellitti flew here with him.

The friar got his own seat—and a complimentary cocktail to boot, according to Cellitti.

The friar's eyes are made of the same plastic material used by doctors to make artificial eyes, Cellitti said. The hands and face were molded after those of real people, he said.

The hungry friar has kept police busy lately.

The friar is placed at a corner window seat. Police receive nightly calls complaining of a strange man eating alone in the restaurant.

"They're thinking about booking him," Cellitti said.

Last week a woman called police and said the "man" must be ill. "I've watched him for a half hour," she said, "and he hasn't moved a muscle."

Friar Tuck is a legendary 14th century character who was one of Robin Hood's merry men. The jovial priest was said to be Robin's confessor at his hideout in the forests of Nottingham.

FRIAR TUCK takes some time out for a ham and swiss cheese sandwich, potato chips and a mug of coffee. The fiber glas friar was flown here three weeks ago as a mascot-in-residence at Friar Tuck's restaurant on the corner of Fifth and Dolores.

Audubon group plans meeting, whale trip

The monthly general meeting Thursday, Feb. 8, will present a slide/lecture show by Alan Baldridge, fomer president of the local chapter. His program entitled A Naturalist in South Florida, will divulge the outdoor attractions found during his four-year stay there.

Everyone is welcome to the free program at Canterbury Woods Auditorium, 651 Sinex Ave., Pacific Grove at 7:30 p.m.

A Beginners' Birdwalk is planned Saturday, Feb. 10 at Robert's Lake and Laguna Grande near K-Mart, Seaside. Birders will meet at 8 a.m. at the Robert's Lake parking lot located on the west side of the estuary. Bring lunch and binoculars.

For more information, phone Dennis Serdehely, 394-2126.

A pelagic trip to view sea birds and California gray whales on their migration to Baja California is scheduled Sunday, Feb. 11 from 8 a.m.-3 p.m. The boat will leave from the Monterey Wharf #2; the cost is $15.

For more information or reservations, phone Debi Robinson, 375-0767.

MPC registration closes on Saturday

There is still time to register for the Monterey Peninsula College spring semester which began Monday, Jan. 29.

Late registration will be accepted through Saturday, Feb. 10. Students should come to the Admissions Office and check posted class schedules, complete registration forms, pay fees and attend the classes of their choice, according to Registrar Sally Jones.

The Admissions Office is open from 10 a.m.-7 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Friday. Friday evening and Saturday students may register in class.

The registration fee is $10 for resident day students and $7 for evening, off-campus, radio, television and newspaper classes. Non-resident students must pay a $46-per-unit tuition.

More information on late registration is available by calling 649-1150, ext. 259.

When the lights went out ...

IT'S AN ARTICLE of faith with theater people that "the show must go on." So what did the local theaters do when the lights went out Friday night? It was opening night for the Staff Players' presentation of School for Wives and for the Studio Theatre's production of Laura. Undaunted by the sudden blackout, players at both theaters finished the show by candlelight.

Meanwhile, at Hidden Valley, Don Pasquale came to a grinding halt when the orchestra was unable to see the music. While everyone waited to see if the power would go back on, the young singers delighted the audience with an impromptu recital of operatic arias.

And unexpected joy was the appearance of Sue Goreniuc, who sang at Hidden Valley for two seasons before going on to San Francisco Opera and a busy career in Germany. By candlelight and flashlight glow, she delivered a smashing Ah! fors'e lui and Sempre libera.

When the opera continued, with piano accompaniment by Joel Ethan Fried, the first words sung by Reg Huston, as Pasquale, were "Let's see now"—which of course brought down the house.

Woman reads the future with help of tarot cards

Why do people get their cards read? "They're just curious," replied Mrs. Arnold. "Everyone wants to know his or her future."

She first learned about the art of tarot reading five years ago. Her six-year-old son, who's now 11, found a tarot deck in an old Monterey home that was about to be torn down. She gave him 25 cents for the deck.

"I just got to fooling around with them," she said. "I read up on them. I'd bring them to a party, and pretty soon everyone would be gathered around me asking me to read their fortune," she said.

Then, she took a course in tarot reading in Seaside. She studied the meanings of each card.

"I don't really think of myself as a mystic, although everyone has within them some degree of mysticism," she said.

Mrs. Arnold's customers are of all ages and backgrounds—teachers, electricians, artists "and plenty of welfare recipients," she said with a laugh.

Mrs. Arnold doesn't like to make house calls. But she will make an exception for "emergency" readings on "urgent matters," she said.

There are some people whose cards she refuses to read. Family and close friends are out.

"I know those people too well; and I start to read into the cards," she said.

Also, she refuses readings of people she dislikes.

"I don't want their bad energy touching my cards," she explained.

Mrs. Arnold will not read her own fortune, either. And she seldom consults other tarot readers. "I just can't afford them," she said.

Mrs. Arnold believes in her abilities. So does her husband, Richard, who is a carpenter. She also studies creative writing at UC Santa Cruz.

"For a long time I never even mentioned I was a tarot reader. People thought I was weird," she said as she carefully wrapped up her deck in the brown cloth. "But now," she added, "I'm kind of arrogant about it."

MRS. ARNOLD believes the cards have mystic powers.

"Each card is more or less a hieroglyph, having certain symbols on them. These symbols have a history of mystical interpretation. During a reading certain symbols stand out to me. These are the ones I believe to represent or to be influencing the person whose fortune I'm reading," she explained.

For example, she added, the tarot card called "The Fool" shows a young man with a dog. "The dog represents faithfulness. The flowers, a rose, that he holds in his hand symbolizes purity. The staff he carries over his shoulder would be the symbol of strength," Mrs. Arnold said.

Why does she believe in the so-called mystic powers of the cards? "Well," Mrs. Arnold replied, "because I've seen results from the readings. Things the cards foretold have come true. There is so much to this that I can't really explain."

PORTIA MANSFIELD

Portia Mansfield, internationally known teacher of dance and theater, died Jan. 29 at Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital. She was 91.

Miss Mansfield, a longtime resident of Carmel, co-founded the Perry-Mansfield School of Theater and Dance in Steamboat Springs, Colo., and operated it for more than 50 years. It is now run by Stephens College, Mo.

Along with her life-long associate, Charlotte Perry, Miss Mansfield started their dance and theater school in 1915. The two friends met while attending Smith College. Starting with $200 and a dozen pupils, the two women began a tradition of teaching the arts, especially dance and drama, in a mountain setting which added to the creative experience.

Miss Mansfield came to Carmel in 1918 with Miss Perry. They had hoped to establish a winter home for their school. After renting land from Frank Devendorf, the women began plans to build a school, but they ran out of money. They had some students in Carmel, practicing on the beach and in the Carmel Highlands area. They presented several performances at the old Hotel Del Monte.

Miss Mansfield was also choreographer and set designer during the early years of the Forest Theater. She maintained a residence both here and in Steamboat Springs. Her Carmel home later served as a winter office, where she edited several films on dance, ran the business for the Colorado school and conducted exercise and dance classes for older people at Sunset Center in Carmel.

Miss Mansfield and Miss Perry were joined by Helen Smith in running the school in 1922. Later, the three began the Perry-Mansfield Boys Camp, now famous for its mountaineering classes in the Rockies.

She was active in the Unitarian Church, the "Save the Whales" movement and the Jacques Cousteau Society. In the last years of her life, she became interested in euthanasia, and, at the age of 87, began work on its legalization.

"I must go on with another project because I'm not ready to retire," she said at the time.

She is survived by her life-long friends and business associates, Miss Smith and Miss Perry, and a sister, Margery Mansfield, of Monterey, Mass.

Inurnment will be in Steamboat Springs. Her friends request memorial donations be made to Ingrid Wekerle, c/o the Arts Department, Communications and Theater Division, Hunter College High School, 94th St. and Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10028. The donations will help the gifted, but economically disadvantaged youth, to study the arts.

BERTRAM ROWLAND

Bertram Rowland, a three-year resident of Carmel, died Jan. 31 at Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital following a lengthy illness. He was 76.

He was born in Philadelphia, Pa., and was an internationally respected art dealer and owner of Rowland's Antiques and Fine Arts in Pennsylvania. He moved to Carmel following his retirement in 1976.

Survivors include his widow, Charlotte, of Carmel; a stepson, Carrol Lippincott, of Lahaska, Pa.; and a granddaughter, Sarah Lippincott, of Lahaska.

Private services were held at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea in Pacific Grove.

MARY L. MULLER

Mary L. Muller died last Friday at Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital after a brief illness. A three-year resident of Carmel, she was 83.

Born in Kilmarnock, Scotland, she lived with her husband, retired Army Col. William G. Muller, in San Francisco before moving to Carmel in 1976.

She is survived by her widower; sons, Col. Thomas Muller of Monterey, Col. William Muller, Jr., of Scarsdale, N.Y., and Col. Frank Muller of Falls Church, Va.; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Cowan of Columbia, S.C.; 17 grandchildren and 28 great-grandchildren.

Services were held at the Catholic Chapel of the Presidio of San Francisco, with burial in the Presidio National Cemetery.

ROBERT H. NICHOLS

Robert Haydn Nichols, an eight-year resident of Carmel, died at his Carmel Meadows home after a long illness. He was 47.

A native of Waterloo, Iowa, he was general sales manager for the Singleton Chevrolet automobile firm in Seaside and a veteran of the U.S. Navy, serving from 1951 to 1956.

Survivors include his widow, Bette Ann of Carmel; son, Mark of Santa Monica; daughters, Mrs. Cynthia Lynch of Monterey, Mrs. Ken Noble of Salinas and Stephanie Nichols of Balboa; mother, Mrs. Blanche Nichols of Houston, Tex.; sisters, Mrs. Marilyn Rippe of Houston, Tex., Mrs. Jeanne Olson of La Habra and Mrs. Virginia Robbins of Milwaukee, Wis., and one granddaughter.

NICOLE ROBINSON BORN

Nicole Meamber Robinson, the first child of Steve and Donna Robinson of Carmel Valley, was born Jan. 20 at the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

The 7-pound, 12-ounce girl is the second grandchild for maternal grandparents Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Boone of Pebble Beach and the ninth for paternal grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Robinson of Ojai.

Besides the visits of her grandparents, Nicole's aunt, Mrs. Robert Beckenhaur of San Jose has been to the Valley to see her niece.

The baby's middle name, Meamber, was the French maiden name of her great-grandmother, Donna said.

Donna quipped that she was teaching at the Carmel River School until the day before Nicole's birth. She plans to return to her third-grade class in three months.

Nicole's father, Steve, is an elementary school teacher at Manzanita School in Seaside.

Asked how she enjoys her new career as a mother, Donna said, "I love it."

WIVES IMMORTALIZED ON STREET SIGNS

THE TWO ACCESS streets to the new Carmel Post Office at Rio Road and Carmel Rancho Boulevard are nameless no longer, thanks to the American Cancer Society and the generosity of two husbands from Carmel and Monterey.

Herbert G. Meyer of Carmel donated $675 to the Society at a benefit auction last November for the privilege of naming the east-west access road Norma Lee Lane, in honor of his wife.

The right to name the north-south street off Rio Road brought $1,300 at the auction. It will be the mailing address of the post office serving the areas outside the city limits of Carmel.

Alexander Heid Jr. of Monterey named the street Via Nona Marie, after his wife.

Both street names have been approved by the Monterey County Planning Department.

How does it feel to have a street bearing your name? Mrs. Meyer, who has lived in Carmel with her husband for 12 years now, said she is "a little embarrassed," but "very proud."

SPORTS SPECTATOR

By JAY POSNER

JOHN LUCIDO'S 15-foot jump shot with five seconds remaining in the game lifted Carmel High to a 50-48 victory over Hollister High last Friday night at Carmel.

The Padres, who were also defeated 56-31 last Tuesday at King City, will travel to Gonzales tomorrow night to play the Spartans at 8 p.m. Next Tuesday, Feb. 13, Carmel will return home to take on North County High at 8 p.m.

Earlier this year, the Padres edged Gonzales 45-43 on a last-second shot by Art Strum and rallied to defeat North County 39-31.

Against Hollister, the Padres trailed 14-6 at the end of the first quarter before Lucido, Strum and Greg Raynes ignited a Padre rally. After Lucido tied the game at 16-16 with a driving lay up, the Balers outscored the Padres 12-5 before Raynes hit a jumper to make the halftime score 28-23.

Carmel came back in the third quarter behind Lucido, Strum and Paul Cater, who scored four points each in the period, to take a 35-30 lead, but then the Padres started playing the sloppy ball that has plagued them throughout the year, and the Balers rallied to take a 38-37 lead at the end of the third quarter.

The fourth period was all Lucido as the senior swingman scored eight of his game-high 21 points in the quarter. The Padres were hurt by the loss of Raynes and Strum via fouls and the burden of scoring was put on Lucido.

The 6'1" senior was up to the task as he hit jumpers with 3:52 and 41 seconds left to give the Padres one point leads, but both times the Balers came back, the last time when Dennis Slipsager made one free throw to tie the game at 48-48 with 30 seconds remaining.

However, Slipsager missed the second free throw and Cater came down with the rebound, setting the stage for Lucido's winning shot which pushed Carmel's Mission Trail Athletic League record to 4-6. The Padres' overall record is 6-16.

Aside from Lucido, Strum scored 10 points and Raynes and Cater added eight and seven, respectively. In the rebounding department, Lucido and Cater had eight each and Raynes pulled down six.

In the game at King City, Carmel led 16-9 in the second quarter before the Mustangs rallied to take a 21-20 halftime lead. In the third quarter, King City outscored the Padres, 16-2, with Carmel's two points coming with only 13 seconds left in the period.

Strum scored 11 points to pace Carmel, while Lucido added nine points and a team high 11 rebounds. Junior forward Mike Wecker pulled down seven rebounds.

IN GIRLS' BASKETBALL, Carmel raised its record to 8-1 in the MTAL and 15-1 overall by routing King City 49-27 and destroying Hollister 53-35.

Sarah Thamer led Carmel's win over Hollister with 19 points, while Dana Hunter and Tracy Hydorn added 12 and 11 points, respectively.

On Friday, Feb. 16, Carmel will close out the regular season by hosting Pacific Grove in a game that will decide the MTAL championship. The game will begin at 6:30 p.m.

THE PADRE field hockey team will host Gonzales this afternoon at 3 p.m. in a showdown for the league title. Carmel is 3-0-1 in league play, while the Spartans' mark is 3-0-2.

Last Thursday in Salinas, Monica Linde scored the only goal of the game to lead the Padres to a 1-0 victory over North Salinas High. Linde's goal was assisted by Jan Clemens.

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
ORDINANCE NO. 79-3
AN ORDINANCE EXTENDING FOR EIGHT (8) MONTHS INTERIM ORDINANCE NO. 78-17 ADOPTED AS AN URGENCY MEASURE PROHIBITING THE CONVERSION OF APARTMENTS IN THE COMMERCIAL DISTRICT OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA TO ANY OTHER USES

1. Urgency Ordinance No. 78-17 was adopted by the City Council on Oct. 2, 1978.

2. Government Code Section 65858 authorizes extending the ordinance for eight (8) months after public hearing.

3. The reasons for adopting the ordinance on Oct. 2, 1978, still exist and more time is needed to study the problems and enact a permanent ordinance.

4. A public hearing was held on Jan. 29, 1979.

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

Section 1. Urgency Ordinance No. 78-17 entitled AN URGENCY ORDINANCE ESTABLISHING A MORATORIUM ON, AND PROHIBITING, THE CONVERSION OF APARTMENTS IN THE COMMERCIAL DISTRICT OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA TO ANY OTHER USES adopted on Oct. 2, 1978, is extended for eight (8) months to midnight, Oct. 1, 1979.

Section 2. Said Urgency Ordinance prohibits the conversion of apartments in the Commercial District to any other uses and purposes, whether or not any authorization or permit has been received from the City for conversion of those apartments to other uses.

Section 3. The City Clerk is ordered to distribute copies of this Ordinance to all holders of the Municipal Code for their information.

Section 4. Effective Date. This Ordinance shall become effective immediately upon its passage and adoption in that it is required for the preservation of the public peace, health, and safety.

PASSED AND ADOPTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA this 29th day of January, by the following role call vote:

AYES: COUNCIL MEMBERS: Arnold, Brown, Brunn, Gross, Norberg
NOES: COUNCIL MEMBERS: None
ABSENT: COUNCIL MEMBERS: None

FREE WANT ADS
For subscribers to the Carmel Pine Cone

A SPECIAL OFFER TO OUR VALUED SUBSCRIBERS

The Pine Cone is happy to be here and we always look forward to meeting our subscribers. As a gesture of our thanks for your continued support, we invite you to have a FREE WANT AD every week, in your paper.

HOW TO WRITE A WANT AD

List the classification you want your ad to appear under in the form at right. Then start your ad with the item you have for sale, etc. Be sure to include your phone number at the end. To make your ad effective, describe your item fully including such things as weight, size, color, age, condition, etc. It is best to list your asking price; this will eliminate calls from people who are not prospective buyers.

RULES:

Free want ads are for person-to-person sales only. Ads for businesses or real estate will not be accepted. Free ads must be written on this form only and delivered to our office by 5 p.m. Monday (no phone ads, please). Free ads are limited to 16 words. The Pine Cone is not responsible for errors in free ads. Limit is one ad per subscriber per week. To run the same ad the following week, a new ad on a new form must be submitted. Publisher reserves the right to refuse to accept any free ad for any reason. Free ads may be placed in the following classifications: Antiques, Autos for Sale, Boats for Sale, Lost & Found, Misc. for Sale, Pets & Livestock, Special Notices, Wanted, Yard Sales.

This label is your ticket for a free ad and must appear here on any ad you turn in. Clip this label from the front page of your weekly Pine Cone.

CARMEL KNOLLS SPACIOUS FAMILY HOME... CLOSE TO EVERYTHING !

Your growing family will find this three-level, approximately 2800-square-foot home adapts to its every need. There are three bedrooms, two complete baths, a cozy den (or fourth bedroom/guest room) and a friendly family room with warm Franklin stove, plus family dining area and an efficient kitchen, PLUS a separate laundry room, on one side. A generous deck opens off the family room through sliding glass doors, and affords canyon views.

On the other side of this home, a formal dining room and lovely, step-down living room with stone fireplace create a unique adult entertainment area. The master suite, with great walk-in closets and dressing area, is also a step-down from the ceramic-tiled entrance hall.

Tiled countertops, all-wood cabinets, double ovens, dishwasher and cooktop make the kitchen a real joy for family cooking or lavish entertaining, and Mom can be part of the conversation, too!

There's also an oversized double garage with electric opener, and a large lot with minimum-care, mature plantings in this desirable, executive-home area, just a hop from schools, shops, churches and every convenience.

2 BDRMS., 2 BATHS, STUDIO WITH BATH, $161,500

What's more, it's SOUTH OF OCEAN, an almost-level walk to town. It's a very well-built home with open-beam ceilings, random width oak floors, fireplace and good-sized rooms. At $161,500 the house is priced to sell TODAY, not a year from now. If you're in the market for this type of property, don't delay calling for an appointment -- it's very easy to show.

RESTORED VICTORIAN ON CANNERY ROW CORNER
C-2 (Commercial) Zoning
EXTRA LOT INCLUDED

The property is now being used as a retail shop in combination with living quarters above. The improvements are at the corner of Wave and David and there's a vacant lot next door that goes with the property. A buyer could continue the present mixed use, could convert to all commercial, can develop all or part of the vacant land, depending the use the property is put to. But whatever happens, the property will probably continue to increase in value as Cannery Row continues to increase in popularity. The price for the entire property is only $285,000.

2 BDRM. CARMEL CONDOMINIUM $135,000

This 4-year-old unit in High Meadow is in really beautiful condition. It has 1½ baths, fireplace, deck and good storage. The area has a pool and 2 tennis courts. Owner will consider a trade for vacant land. Shown any time.

2 BDRMS., 2 BATHS NEAR TOWN $147,500

This is a fairly new, very tastefully decorated home with a very good and also interesting floor plan. Its name, "Fernloft," is indicative of the unusual character of the home. There's a studio or private office near the garden entrance, and a good-sized, usable deck off the living room. Real value at $147,500.

1-BDRM. CARMEL COTTAGE, $97,500

This is about as authentic a Carmel charmer as you'll find these days. The redwood board-and-batt interior has NOT been painted white, nor have the redwood open-beam ceilings. There's a real brick fireplace, a sunny fenced patio facing south and a genuine concrete foundation. The latter does not always come with a house priced under $100,000. Exclusive.

4 BDRMS., GUEST HOUSE, HUGE LOT NEAR TOWN

This is a small estate on about a two-thirds acre parcel of land 6 blocks south of Ocean Ave., an easy walk to the Village. The property has 3 baths, separate dining room, family room and a 1-bedroom guest house with bath and fireplace. The house has random-width, oak plank, pegged floors, shake roof, patios, wood and brick exterior. It's a beautifully-built, older (but not old) Carmel home in a beautiful oak-studded setting. It's secluded yet almost in town. Outstanding value at $295,000.

3 BDRMS. WITH SPECTACULAR OCEAN VIEW

Situated high on a hill with an unparalleled view of Point Lobos and the Fish Ranch, this house is one of the finest examples of contemporary architecture in the area. Built entirely of brick, the house features a spacious living room with a 21' high ceiling, dining room, family room, breakfast room, den, 3 bedrooms, 2½ baths. Finished with meticulous care, the house abounds with teak veneer built-in cabinets, and the matching room doors are set in solid teak frames. Copper piping is used throughout the house, and there is a recirculating loop and pump for instant hot water at all faucets. Offered at $350,000. Exclusive.

1 BDRM. WITH CHARM & A STUDIO $135,000

This little jewel has one of the nicest living rooms we've seen in a small Carmel cottage. It has beamed-ceilings, and a large, concave, stone corner fireplace. There's a separate dining room, an updated kitchen and the detached studio has a full bath. It's a super charmer.

Quite a quartet!

This house takes a bit of absorbing. At first glance, one may feel he is entering an Oriental village. There are 4 square buildings of varying size, with shingled walls and shingled hip-roofs, all set slightly above the terrain on short, sturdy pilings. The Carmel River marks the southern boundary of the one-acre site. A bridge spans the river; and on all sides, but at some distance, the Valley mountains rise toward the sky.

Each building has its own special function, and all are linked together by a spectacular series of decks, galleries and corridors. Once inside, the 4 buildings are so beautifully integrated you forget there are four.

You enter off a deck and into a long gallery with parquet floors and very high ceilings. To your right is the largest unit, a square that rises 16 feet to the roof-line, with huge open beams soaring to a center point and skylights opening from 4 planes. Below this is the expansive living room with its great fireplace and doors opening to a deck overlooking the river.

Semi-partitions separate the comfortable kitchen from the living room, and a many-windowed dining room projects along the west wall. The kitchen is finished in natural pine, birch cabinets provide abundant room, blue tile counter tops add color, and a greenhouse window shelters a planting area above the sink. In this same area is a half-bath and large storage and laundry room. Another deck, set above a fountain, links this with the garage unit at the front.

The other two units are bedroom areas, opening from the gallery at the opposite end. On the front are two bedrooms, large bath and spacious family room — almost an apartment in itself. Opposite this and facing the river is the master suite, truly luxurious. Ceilings are ten feet high, glass doors open to a private deck, semi-partitions separate dressing areas, closets and the superb bath from the very large bedroom.

All floors (except the parquet gallery) are richly carpeted. The house has its own soft-water system fed by natural wells, a central vacuum system and flood lights illuminating the entire property.

It's 2 miles east of Carmel Rancho Shopping Center. Turn right on Rancho San Carlos Road, and it's the last house on the right before you cross the bridge. It's nearly new and has every comfort. $245,000.
